REPUBLICAN TICKET.

STATE.

For Governor.
GEORGE WALLACE DELAMATER,
Of Crawford County.
For Lieutenant Governor.
LOUIS A. WATRES,
Of Lackawana County.
For Secretary of Internal Affairs,
THOMAS A. STEWART,
Of Montgomery County.

COUNTY.

Representatives { G. G. MATTERN. / C. T. FRYBERGER.
Sheriff—JOHN A. WOLF.
Treasurer—EDWIN TYSON.
Recorder—JOHN HARTER.
Register—GEORGE W. FISHER.
Commissioners { J. B. STROHM. / D. B. KUNES.
Auditors { SAMUEL T. GRAY. / W. B. KRAPE.

If the people of Centre county fail to elect Edwin Tyson treasurer it will be an open proof that the voter does not vote to his own interest.

Apples are being ordered in Vermon from Michigan. A fruit dealer says there are not enough apples in the Otter valley below Middlebury to make a pin of cider for each of the inhabitants of Puritan stock.

The voters of Centre county have seen the good results of a republican administration and intend to have three years more of it. For this reason every man on the republican ticket will be elected.

James B. Strohm and D. B. Kunes the republican candidates for county commissioners, are making votes by the dozen every week. And why? Simply because the people see that they are the men for the place. Let everybody vote for them.

Adams does not seem to stand in well with his own party. Why he wont get three fourths of the democratic vote in his own precinct, let alone a full vote anywhere else. Over in Pennsvalley the democrats make no bones about what they are going to do. They come out plainly and say they wont support Adams. Poor man, guess when this campaign is over he will have had enough of politics.

It is now more than ever necessary to put up a good candidate for Congress in this district. The enemy is demoralized. They are in a predicament. They can't turn back and it will be death to go ahead, if the republicans put the right man in the field. This it is necessary to do. Let the party leaders bestir themselves and see that a good man is taken up and his election will be almost a certainty. Now is the time to send a republican congressman from this district.

Are the farmers of Centre county going to cast their votes to send two such men as J. H. Holt and John T. McCormick to represent them in the legislative halls at Harrisburg? Well hardly; they have got their eyes opened now and this fall the men elected to go to Harrisburg will be men of a far different stripe. Men who will think and work for the interests of their constituents. Mattern and Fryeberger are the two men who will go to Harrisburg next year.

What offices are Robert Cooke and John Henderson running for? Every time we look at the Democrat we have wondered as above, and for the life of us we can't think. But they must be running for something as our uptown contemporary is cautioning the voters not to vote for them, and in addition, is week after week, publishing columns of filthy lies about both of the above named gentlemen. Wonder if the juvenile editor knows there is a campaign in progress.

If the Democrats mean what they say, and they generally do, Wolfe will be elected Sheriff this fall by not less than four hundred majority. It is really astonishing to hear what kicking there is on Ishler in his own party and how many democrats there are that will vote for Wolfe. There is hardly one election precinct in the whole county but there are kicking democrats to be found. On Saturday a leading democrat, but no kicker, said in this office that he was satisfied that Wolfe would be elected by several hundred majority.

Mass Meeting!

The Republican candidates on the State ticket, Hon. George W. Delamater, Hon. Louis A. Watres and Hon. Thomas J. Stewart, accompanied by Gen. D. H. Hastings and other distinguished speakers of both State and National fame, will meet the people of Centre county in the Court House, Bellefonte on TUESDAY EVENING, OCTOBER 14. All voters, irrespective of politics, are earnestly invited to be present on this occasion and hear the issues of the campaign ably and impartially discussed.

The result of the coming election reaches far beyond the limits of Pennsylvania, the eyes of the whole nation resting on the banner protection state

Let there be a full turnout of Republicans and all who are in accord with honest government.

Special trains will return over the Lewisburg & Tyrone and over the Buffalo Run railroads on the evening of this meeting, leaving Bellefonte at about 10 o'clock. The train over the Bald Eagle railroad East will be held until 9.30 o'clock p. m., so as to accommodate the people of Milesburg and east Bald Eagle valley.

A number of cornet bands have been engaged for the occasion; pyrotechnics will be had and a monster mass meeting is assured.

A DISTINCT ADVANCE.

The address of Mr. George W. Curtis delivered before the National Civil Service Reform League, in Boston, Wednesday evening, shows an encouraging advance over the position taken in previous addresses by the same gentleman. There is less of the partisan and more of the impartial critic in the review he gives of the progress made by civil service reform daring the past year. This is certainly commendable and the sincere friends of the reform will hail the new spirit which seems to actuate the league and its distinguished president as the longest step yet taken toward realization of their hopes.

It is not too much to claim that in past addresses Mr. Curtis has sought to minimize the proofs that the Republican party was favorable to civil service reform and to magnify every evidence that the Democratic party favored it. In his address in this city one year ago he quoted from a New Hampshire and West Virginia newspapers to illustrate that the attitude of the Republican press was distinctly hostile to the movement, and utterly ignored the fact that every prominent organ of the party, with, perhaps, one exception only, had declared decidedly in its favor. This year, however, Mr. Curtis, recognizing his error, acknowledges the position of these papers on this question.

In other respects, also, the Boston address of Mr. Curtis shows progress. We do not think that he does full justice to the efforts of the Republican party even yet, but there is a disposition to deal with it more candidly. Mr. Curtis knows that it is the average sentiment which controls political organizations. And it is hardly possible that he can doubt that there is a vastly greater number of civil service reformers in the Republican party than in the Democratic party. With this fact evident, it is easy to foresee from which party the movement has the most to hope.

During the "soft" money craze there were Republican as well as Democratic advocates of inflation, but they formed only a small minority in the Republican party, while they were in a majority in the Democratic party. What the result was with the Republican party in power, and what it would have been with the Democratic party in power, Mr. Curtis knows well.

The candidates are the same in respect to civil service reform, and it is the tardy recognition of this fact, probably, that has lent a more impartial tone to the recent address of Mr. Curtis. At all events, it will be welcomed as an acceptable change and the result will be that the league will gain many friends among those who have apprehended heretofore that the organization was actuated by partisan motives alone.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our regular Correspondent.)

Washington, Oct., 6, 1890.

The President left on his Western trip this morning. He will go direct to Galesburg, Ill., where his old brigade will hold a reunion on Wednesday. Thursday he will take part in the "Soldiers' Day" exercises at the Ottumwa, Iowa, Exposition. Friday he will attend the veterans celebration at Topeka-Kan., going from there to visit his brother at Kansas City. Saturday he will be the honored guest of the Veiled Prophet, who will hold his gorgeous annual festival at St. Louis on that day. Sunday he will spend at his old Indianapolis home and Monday morning he will start on his return, coming by way of Pittsburg, and he is expected back at the White House on Tuesday,

When will Congress put an end to the ridiculous and expensive practice of closing a department of the Government on the day of the funeral of every ex-secretary? Saturday the Treasury department was closed on account of the death of Hon. P. F. Thomas, of Maryland, who was for less than a month in the last days of the Buchanan administration, Secretary of the Treasury. I have not the exact data, but am quite sure that it costs the Government at least $20,000 to close that department, one of the largest, for a day, and it means nothing but a holiday for the employes, who are already liberally provided for in that respect. This senseless custom furnishes a great opportunity for some watch dog of Uncle Sam's money box to make fame and at the same time save considerable amount of cash.

To-day the McKinley tariff law goes into effect, and Secretary Windom says there will be no trouble at even the most remote Custom Houses, as copies of the new law were mailed to all of the collectors some days ago, and full instructions have been prepared at the Treasury department in regard to its interpretation and administration, and telegraphed to the more prominent ports. Owing to the extraordinary efforts of the importers to load up before the new law went into effect, it is expected that there will he a great decrease in import duties for some months to come.

The democrats are in a wooful state of mind over the condition of the Congressional campaign, and already many of them are discounting the defeat which they see staring them in the face by saying that they would prefer seeing the next House republican because it would increase their chances of carrying the Presidential election of '92, but all the same they are doing their level best to carry it themselves. All this talk about the democratic campaign committee not having any money is simply bosh. It is a part of the "keep-easy" programme which Mr. Flower has adopted. They have all the money they want, and it behooves the republicans of the close and doubtful districts to keep their eyes wide open to see that none of it is used corruptly. It is because it is intended to use it in that manner that this cry of "no money" has been raised. Mr. Flower, the millionaire chairman of the democratic Congressional committee, started it by complaining, in a newspaper interview, that no one had contributed to the campaign fund but himself, and that he had a purpose in making that statement is not for a moment to be doubted, and that purpose is to make the republicans believe that their opponents will have no money to spend on the election.

Capt. James E. White, of Chicago, has been appointed Superintendent of the Railway Mail Service to succeed J. Lowrie Bell, promoted to be Second Assistant Postmaster General. Capt. White has been continuously connected with the Railway Mail Service since the close of the war, and was one of the two division superintendents retained by the Cleveland administration, and is eminently qualified to fill the position with credit to himself and satisfaction to the public.

Secretary Tracy has given the contracts for building two of the mammoth battle ships, provided for by Congress, to the Cramps of Philadelphia, and for the other one to the Union Iron Works of San Francisco. They are to cost $3,120,000 each.

Representative Sawyer, speaking for the majority of the committee engaged in investigating the charges against Gen. Raum, says that nothing has been proved which reflects in the slightest degree upon either his private or official integrity.

A circular of instructions to Postmasters, defining the new anti lottery law, has been issued by the Postmaster General.

The Navy department has formally accepted the new cruiser San Francisco. It has also contracted for the building of four new ships to cost more than eleven millions of dollars. Our navy is growing, and the additions are the best in the world.

THE FIFTY FIRST CONGRESS.

The grand old party is true to the flag. All the Republican promises have been fulfilled. In nine months a republican congress has redeemed all its pledges, showing a record quite unparalleled. Thousands of dollars saved by economical administration, and a rise in agricultural values of at least one thousand millions brought about by wise legislation. Behold the record:

A federal election law; a protective tariff law; silver restored; obstruction knocked out; a just pension law; contract labor forbidden; convict labor forbidden; an effective 8-hour law; the American hog vindicated; a uniform bankruptcy law; ten more new states; six new ships for the navy; labor fortifications; Supreme court relieved and Shipping bills. All the above important legislation the work of one nine months' session of a Republican Congress. In addition there have been many other of a little less importance, but all wise and much needed laws.

The above is the record of a republican congress. Can the democratic party show any like record that can be credited to the workings of a democratic congress? No, not they. Economy, efficiency and good sense have been the guiding stars of the fifty first congress. Every question has been judiciously handled and very ably disposed of. There is no stain or blot resting on the republican party because of the doings of a republican congress. The elections about to take place are for members of the fifty second congress. The record of the congress just adjourned appeals to the people for a renewal of their confidence. See to it that republican members are elected and returned. If you want what you demand the only way to get it is to elect republican congressmen. We especially call your attention to the following and ask you careful consideration for the same:

Do you wish your Congress to be an orderly, deliberate assembly, or do you wish it to be a lawless mob? If the former vote for a republican congressman.

Do you want good money and plenty of it, or bad money and not even enough of that to go around? If the former vote the republican ticket.

Will the workingmen and their organizations stand by the party which keeps its promises and performs its duties to them, or will they prefer the party which violates its promises and doesn't see its duties? If the former vote for the G. O. P.

Are you in favor of a merchant marine, do you wish to see the stars and stripes restored to their old place on the high seas, or are you willing to have America remain dependent upon foreign ships for a foreign trade?

Do you wish the nation to keep its promises to the men who kept its flag aloft, or would you have it leave them to the tender mercies of poor houses and private charity? In all the above cases the only safe and positive remedy is to vote for the Republican ticket. The elections of the Republican party have never yet gone back on the men who put them in office. They have always fulfilled to the letter the promises made in conventions assembled and they always will legislate in the interest of home and the masses. You will be consulting your own interest by voting the straightout republican ticket.

Everybody knows Samuel T. Gray and Wm. B. Krape, the Republican candidates for Auditors. Two men better qualified to fill the offices could not have been found in Centre county. They are both clean, honest, conscientious men and the auditing of the county's affairs, if they are elected and made by them, will be done in a strictly business-like way. No $38,000 campaign steals can be smuggled through or no money belonging to the schools and townships throughout the county can be illegally appropriated to the county treasury, as was done a number of years ago.

THE DEMOCRATIC POW-WOW.

A SMALL CROWD AND FIVE BRASS BANDS ASSEMBLE TO HEAR DEMOCRATIC CAMPAIGN DOCTRINE.

For a week it had been widely advertised that Pattison, Black, Hensel, Wright & Co., would be in Bellefonte on Tuesday evening. The weather on Tuesday, of course, can be blamed to a certain extent for the miserably small crowd that came into Bellefonte to see and hear the democratic standard bearers. Outside of residents of the town and outlying suburbs there were not two hundred and fifty people, exclusive of bands, in Bellefonte. The arrival of the train bearing the distinguished visitors was anxiously awaited. It was over an hour late, being just 7.10 when the engine and one Pullman car backed up to the depot. The party was met at the depot with carriages and conveyed at once to Garman's opera house, which had been thrown open for the occasion. The house was soon filled, but they were mostly all Bellefonters and about half republicans at that.

C. M. Bower, Esq., called the meeting to order and named Ex-Gov. Curtin as chairman of the evening. A long list, including fully half the democrats in Centre county, of vice Presidents was then read off and a half score or so of secretaries appointed, none of which were visible, however, after which Mr. Curtin introduced the first speaker of the evening, Mr. Field, of Pittsburg.

The speaker did not talk long until everyone readily concluded that he was the right man in the right place, inasmuch as he had good sense enough to not attempt to make his hearers believe that the democratic party had a record. He eulogized Governor Curtin, complimented Beaver, spoke kindly of Hastings and incidentally referred to Pattison as a former Comptroller of Philadelphia. His speech was remarkable because both republicans and democrats could listen to it without having any cause for offense as it seemed more like a school boy's eulogy of the record of his state than a political speech in favor of Pattison and democracy.

After the first speaker got through Gov. Curtin got up and made a few remarks, which really won the only applause of the evening. The governor, in the course of his remarks, grew very emphatic, declaring that there was not a d——n spot or blemish on the character or administration of Mr. Pattison. Mr. Curtin waxed rather eloquent but all the time he seemed as if he was pleading for a lost cause.

Mr. Pattison was the next speaker and when he advanced to the front of the stage the only cheer that amounted to anything during the evening was given and it was not general by any means. The ex-governor spoke at some length on the American and the un-American government, as he termed them, and during his remarks had frequent recourse to that little but big personal pronoun "I." In making a comparison of the annual expenditures of his administration and that of the present incumbent, General Beaver, Mr. Pattison made an insinuating remark about the charity funds of Johnstown having been mis-appropriated, when he was at once given a storm of hisses. This was a little unexpected to the speaker, and, to again get into the good graces of his hearers, he made a very apologetic explanation of what he meant, not what he said. Black and several other speakers followed Mr. Pattison, but they only rolled along in the same old rut, hence it is not necessary to chronicle what they said.

Owing to the great number of boys crowding into the opera house it was not quite large enough to hold the entire crowd and the doors of the court house were thrown open and about 75 to 100 gathered in there and listened to Col. J. L. Spangler and others discuss Republicanism. All in all it was a very poor thing for a campaign mass meeting and if Pattison is not greeted with any more enthusiastic crowds anywhere else he might about as well hang up his fiddle and his bow and go home to Philadelphia. Vote the whole Republican ticket,

Why is it that the democratic papers keep up such a running fire against John Harter? If they are so sure of the election of W. Gaylor Morrison as they let on they are there is certainly no use in printing so many lies about a man as they are weekly publishing about Harter. But it is our opinion, and not ours alone, that the way they are going for the present recorder is a candid and open acknowledgment that they think Morrison's chances for being elected are very poor and this accounts for the extra amount of free puffs now being given to Harter. It is plainly a "dead give away."

STOOD IN WITH THE CONDUCTOR

A Sharp Young Man's Method of Street Car Riding Without Paying Fare.

"I have not failed to ride down town on a north side grip car free of charge for a week," said a smooth faced, dapper young man to his companions as he stood on the corner of Clark and Centre streets waiting for a chance to get aboard a car, in the hearing of a Chicago Times reporter.

That's so? Tell us how you do it and we will work the snap, too, said his companions in the same breath.

Well, it's this way: There are always a lot of people on the corner waiting for a car and while the conductor is helping the women on I jump aboard in front and take a seat inside. Then I pulled out a paper and become intent on the news.

The gripman, nine times out of ten, is busy fixing his tession screw or watching the track ahead, and pays no attention to me. When the conductor comes through the car for his fares I never look up, and he has doubts about me, but usually after a hard stare at me his memory gives out and he passes on.

Don't believe it works more'n one time in a hundred, said one of the listeners.

Bet you a V I'll do it on the ride down town, promptly responded the smooth faced individual.

It's a go, said his companion.

The money was put up in the hands of the other member of the party, and the trio prepared to board a car. But for some reason the first limits car that came along did not seem to suit the free ride man, and there being little room in it he had an excuse to wait for the next one.

This was a Lincoln avenue car, and he directed his friends to get aboard on the rear platform while he gained entrance in front as he had explained. Sitting down about the centre of the car, he pulled a paper from his pocket and began reading with great intenseness.

His friends secured seats near him and watched the proceedings. The conductor went through to the front and collected a fare, then on to the two friends, got his nickels, gave an old lady change for a quarter in pennies refused to accept a Canadian dime from a fashionably dressed young woman and passed out without so much as a glance in the direction of our reading friend.

Just as he was opposite him, however the dilligent reader rustled his paper vigorously, quite like a man whose sole thought was to find the editorial column or the funny paragraphs.

When the three arrived at Washington street they alighted and sought the seclusion of a saloon to pay the stakes.

"Pretty good scheme. I'll work it myself," said the one who had lost the V.

"Yes, it's easy when you know how." replied the winner as he pocketed his $10. Then he left, and in another minute was at the tunnel entrance where he caught the same car that he had come down on.

"I had great luck that time, Jimmie" said he, as he handed the conductor $2.50.

He Started a Graveyard.

Out in the Erie coal fields, near Burlington, Colo., a few years ago, a lean, reckled-faced fellow, with high Spanish heels on his boots, walked into the Stone and Quartz Saloon at Burlington and leaning his long body on his bony arms on the bar, turned around to the half-dozen loiterers who were in the place, and with a drawl drew his lantern jaw down on his flannel shirt and said:

"How long has this yer camp been a runnin'?"

"Two years," replied the bar-tender without raising his eyes.

"Graveyard begun yit?"

"Not yit."

"'Bout time the camp had one S'pose I start one?"

One bony arm left the bar. It never reached its owner's belt. There was a noise that sounded like a man dropping a log chain in an empty hardware store, and this noise was followed by a crash of exploding six shooters from the loiterers. A curtain of white smoke roiled up against the ceiling. The man at the bar made a lurch and then fell upon the floor. Six bullets were in his body.

A graveyard was started in Burlington the next morning. The lean man started it himself. Burlington is now wiped out but high up on Boar Rib Butte is one grave. It is the only one the camp left.

Stopping the Press.

I was sitting in the office of a Kentucky weekly paper, and the editor had just furnished proof of the fact that he was editor, printer, compositor, pressman and small boy, when a shock-headed lad came in to say:—

'Mr. Laggers, he 'uns's waitin' down har' for you!'

'Who's a-waitin'?'

'Kurnel Brill.'

'What's he 'un want?'

'Ter shute, I reckon.'

'Go'n tell he 'un to wait till next week; I'm too busy.'

When the boy had gone the editor turned to me with: "You kin see for yourself what's a holdin' me down, That Kurnel Brill is no gentleman, or he wouldn't put in when he knows I'm rushed.'

The boy came back a moment later o say;—

He 'un can't wait.'

'Why?'

'Says he cum in ter shute, an' has got to shute an' he will shute.'

'Dod rot sech a man! I reckon I'll hev to go down. Didn't like my leader last week and wants to shute. He 'un's no gentleman, no gentleman. I'll be back in a few minites, stranger.'

I sat there in the office and heard the reports of pistols, and I looked out of the window and saw a crowd; and ten minutes later the editor came in with his right ear split by a bullet, and somewhat petulently remarked:—

'And now thar'll be a Coroner's inquest, and I'll hev to lose at least half a day! If the Kurnel wanted to pop at me, why couldn't he 'un hev waited till some tramp printer cum along to ease me off a bit? He was no gentleman—no gentleman.'

Five Years Old, and a Wonder.

A remarkable young musical wond has just been brought to the notice of the music loving public of Chicago. She is little Elsie Breidt, the five year old daughter of Julius Breidt, of 2510 Cottage Grove avenue, a jeweler and watchmaker. Her mother says that when she was two years old the child began to sing airs that any one might be playing at the piano. When the little girl grew larger she used to climb up on the piano stool and strike the keys as if she had been taught how to do it a long time ago. She immediately learned to play chords, and before she was three years of age could carry parts of the air correctly. Half a year later she played accompaniments to the violin, and when she was little more than four years old she began to compose or improvise. Her mother says: "One day there was a terrible rain and thunder storm, and when it was over Elsa went to the piano and played the wildest sort of an air that almost brought the storm and its music back to me. She will get up on the piano stool and begin singing softly some measure or strains that have come into her head, and after humming it over several times she plays it. That is the way she composes her pieces. If I play sentimental or live music it affects her strangely; in fact, we cannot play pathetic airs, as the tears come to her eyes and she is much agitated. She enjoys herself much as other children do, but if she hears the sound of music she will stand listening with mouth wide open. Any ordinary composition she can play almost absolutely correct after having heard it once."

The father and mother of the little girl have been unwilling to have her obtain notoriety, but some music teachers who know of the little one's genius have told others about her. Lilly Lehman, D'Albert and most of the local musical world have heard the child play. D'Albert wants her to go to his home in Germany and recieve a thorough musical education. When he was here Elsa played for him. The great musician declared that her genius was wonderful. The other day she played for a party of critics. First she gave a selection from Schumann. The execution was pronounced marvelous and after the child had finished with an improvised little melody of her own the musicians went into an ecstacy of praise. One of the best things she did was to play an "Ave Maria." Although it had been weeks since she had touched the Bach Gounod composition, she gave it without missing a note or sounding a false one.

ONCE WAS ENOUGH.

A young gentleman who lately left his home in England, having exhausted his credit, telegraphed to his parents:—

"Your son was killed this morning by a falling chimney. What shall we do with the remains?"

In reply a check was sent for £20, with the request "bury them." The young gentleman pocketed the money and had an elaborate spree. When in a condition for writing he sent his father the following note:—

"I have just learned that an infamous scoundrel named Barker sent you a fictitious account of my death, and swindled you out of £20. He also borrowed £10 of me and left the country. I write to inform you that I am still alive, and long to see the parental roof again. I am in somewhat reduced circumstances, the accumulations of the last five years having been lost—a disastrous stock operation—and if you would only spare me £20 I would be very thankful for your favor. Give my love to all."

A few days later the young man received the following dignified letter from his outraged parent:—

"MY DEAR SON:—I have buried you once, and that is the end of it. I decline to have any transactions with a ghost.

Yours in the flesh,
FATHER."

Mistress—"Bridget, do you know what all that crowd was on the corner this morning?" Bridget—"Yis, mem. It was the police was a-taking a lady to the joog. She had been fighting."

"Whar gwine, Sambo?" "Gwine to court to testify." "What for?" "Oh, gemman stole a pair ob boots las' night an' I 'greed to gib him a good character for ha'f a dollar."

Youngest Brother—I saw a two-headed calf at the circus.

Youngest Sister—That's nothing. I saw a two headed woman out in the hammock last night. (Ethel and Mr Arden blush confusedly.)—Puck

Mr. NOOLY—Say; I want a coat of arms.

"And your business?"

"Hain't got none now—made my money in vinegar."

"I see. How would "What is Home Without a Mother?' suit you for a legend?"

Hard Luck—Why so downcast?

I lost a magnificent umbrella yesterday?

Leave it in the car.

No; I met the owner of it on the street and he recognized it at once.

'May I have the honor of this waltz?' 'But I don't think I have the pleasure of your acquaintance.' 'O, yes, I trod on your foot about half an hour since, and I heard you say you would remember me as long as you lived."

Village Storekeeper (to his partner)—Things look pretty blue for us, partner. We have loaded up with too many goods?

Partner—Can't we get Secretary Windom to come to our relief?

Mr. Lesse—That's so, Emma. You'd have an engagement ring if I had the rocks.

DOCTORS AND TYPHOID FEVER.

An Interesting and Instructive Paper—It should be read and Studied by all.

During the last three or four months there have been a great many deaths from typhoid fever in our county. In some families as many as three and four have died from this disease. The truth is that sickness and death from this disease seem to be on the increase instead of the decrease. There is cause for this and it is proper to inquire whether the physicians of the county have done anything whatever to ascertain the cause of so much fever and, if possible, stamp it out.

In every case of typhoid fever the physician, as soon as called, should not only look after the patient but set himself dilligently to work, and not let up until he finds out what brought the fever on that patient. He should also use the most vigorous methods to prevent the disease from attacking anyone else. Directions as to what ought to be done are not sufficient. He should see that they are carried out, if he must knock down and drag out to accomplish his purpose.

Dr. Henry B. Baker says "the greatest number of deaths from typhoid fever is of persons in the prime of life, and this should prompt to greater efforts for the prevention of the disease."

The same authority says that "typhoid fever is a disease which, it is important that citizens of every village should understand, because of the nature of the Soil and earth underlying villages and the surrounding country from which the milk supply comes. Sooner or later there will come a time when no ordinary well in such a place can be safely relied upon to supply water free from the specific cause of typhoid fever."

For a year or more past we have had a vast quantity of rain. The ground was literally filled with water. Barn yards and cess pools overflowed and how much of this foul drainage found ts way into the wells which form the sources of the supply of water for drinking or culinary purposes, or for the watering of cattle it is impossible to tell. But enough to produce, through the water supply, or the use of the milk from cows supplied with such water, many cases of typhoid fever and to cause much loss of life.

It is now believed says the same authority that typhoid fever is most frequently taken by means of the drinking water that the microscopic cause of the disease is probably reproduced in the bodies of persons who have the disease, and that this specific cause gains access to the drinking water by filtering through the soil, and sometimes by being washed into wells or streams from which the drinking water is drawn.

The well known outbreak of typhoid fever at Plymouth, Pa., where over a thousand cases and 114 deaths occured, is a forcible illustration of how great a calamity may follow the fouling of a general water supply by the specific cause of typhoid fever.

The prevention and restriction of typhoid fever requires the disinfection of all bowel discharges from those sick with this disease and constant watchfulness of the sources of supply of water for culinary purposes. All water from a suspected source should be boiled before its use. Numerous instances are reported where typhoid fever has been spread by the rinsing of milk cans with water apparently pure, but really infected with the germs of typhoid fever, capable of infecting the milk. This teaches the importance of having water free from typhoid infection for all household purposes."

Liberal quotations have been made from this authority for the purpose of showing the absolute danger we are constantly in of contracting typhoid fever from the water used in our house. In view of this do our physicians give as much attention to the health and welfare, not only of their patents, but of the people as they should? With typhoid fever raging in places to an alarming extent have the physicians done what they could and should to discuss the cause and then kill it.

The state board of health stands ready to do what ever it can to stop the destruction of life caused by this fearful disease. Are the people and physicians of the county using the means at their command to check the fever and remove from among them its cause? With proper care and due vigilance cases of typhoid fever can be made as scarce among us as that of the small-pox.

—We have been informed by the committee who are soliciting subscriptions for the new fire engine that they are doing remarkably well and expect to raise the money ere long. This is an encouraging thing to hear and Bellefonte citizens are deserving of congratulation for their liberality and readiness to respond to the appeals of the committee.

—Some newspapers advertising agents have more gall than a country editor, ten times over. A New York concern recently offeret to send us, in five years, a $100 type writer if we would give them $900 worth of advertising and send them our paper to boot. We might have given them the advertising but when it come to sending our paper in addition, why we squeal. And now if that ten-cent shoddy concern wants to advertise in our paper they will have to send us 9 of their $100 type writers and we will give them but $100 worth of advertising and—our paper thrown in; and the machines must be sent in advance, too.

FIDELIS.

In Other Counties.

There is a rumor that nail works may be established near Lewistown.

C. C. Chambers, of Punxsutawney, is the owner of a colt which has five legs.

Clearfield county's official population is given out as 69,545, a gain of 26,137 since 1880.

Among the eighteen inmates of the Clearfield prison is one bearing the honored name of George Washington

Among recent deaths in Juniata county was that of Miss Jane McAlister, of McAlisterville, of consumption.

Brown C. Dawney has been appointed district president of the new district created by the institution of the two camps Patriotic Order Sons of America in Fulton county.

The Odd Fellows of Philipsburg, Centre county, expect to have representatives present from forty lodges, and a grand time generally at the dedication of their new hall on the 15th inst.

The Odd Fellows of Fulton county will have a parade in McConnellsburg tomorrow; several addresses will also be delivered.

Thomas H Murray, Esq., of Clearfield, is billed for a lecture in Altoona on the evening of the 14th inst. He is a scholarly and eloquent orator.

A large planing mill at Irvona, Clearfield county, owned by a company of citizens, was recently destroyed by fire. Loss, $2,500; no insurance.

An Editor Owns Coal Lands.

We notice that the new editor of the Indiana Gazette has secured 30,000 acres of coal land in the northern portion of that county recently. The land is underlaid with a 7-foot coal vein, and he has located the Beech Creek railroad through the centre of the tract, with lateral roads running out right and left.—Clearfield Republican.

"Jee-whiz!" Thirty thousand acres of coal land owned by an editor! Owned, mind you; all paid for and "his'n." And then underlaid with a 7-foot vein of coal and located on a railroad to boot. There surely must be something wrong somewhere. Either the man in question isn't an "editor" or else if he is he will soon go crazy. He can't own 30,000 acres of good coal lands and remain sane.

A Big Coal Find.

The labors of the people of Houtzdale who have been shafting for the 'B' vein for several months, were rewarded on Tuesday by the discovery of the 'C' vein. It is located 110 feet below the surface, and is 3½ feet thick. The quality of the coal is said to be very superior. The "B" vein is about forty five feet further down. J. L. Mitchell, of Tyrone, has the contract and is sinking the shaft.

There was much rejoicing in Houtzdale over the find as it will be worth at least two hundred thousand dollars to that locality. Now if they can strike the B' vein then they will almost go wild.

They Want Hastings for Congress.

The Clearfield County Republican Convention met in the Opera House on Tuesday and nominated the following ticket: For Assembly, Thomas B Byer; Treasurer, Robert R Fleming; County Commissioners, John McGaughey and B F Harley; County Auditors, J C *Har*mon and John H Martin. M L McCowan was elected chairman of the county Committee.

The following resolutions were passed:

"Resolved, That it is the sense of this convention that Gen. D H Hastings, of Centre county, by reason of his prominent fitness in legislative abilities, would make an available candidate for Congress, one on whom all the Republicans could unite, and to whom they could give their hearty support.

"Resolved, That the Congressional conferrees this day elected are requested to advise General Hastings of the sentiment of this convention, which voices that of the Republican party of Clearfield county, and to urge him to accept the nomination for Congress in this, the Twenty eighth District. In case of his acceptance and nomination, we pledge ourselves, individually and unitedly, to give him the heartiest possible support."

Autumn Arbor Day.

In an official circular, D. J Waller, Jr. superintendent of public instruction says:

Inasmuch as many schools were closed before Arbor day in April last, set apart by proclamation of his excellency Governor Beaver, and in order to promote tree culture by all our youth, Friday, the 24th day of October, is appointed as a day to be observed by the schools of the state as the Autumnal Arbor day. The state superintendent recommends that recitation or reading of appropriate selections, and of compositions prepared upon any of the myriad forms of vegetable life, or upon methods of propagating trees from seeds, nuts and stones, is helpful. If an authority upon tree culture can be secured, let him be invited to give the school a talk upon the subject. Let each teacher keep tree culture in mind as the desired end, and not feel that any formal exercises is to be imitated, but that a plan must be devised and followed that most effectively promotes tree culture, The suggestions of former years are repeated, that "How to render most effective the observance of Arbor day by the schools should find a place upon the programme of county institutes," and that a question or two upon this subject may properly constitute a part of the examination of teachers. Superintendents are requested to report, as nearly as possible, the number of trees planted during the year through the observance of Arbor day.

The King's Daughters' President.

There are now nearly 200,000 "King's Daughters" in the land, and Mrs. Margaret *B*ottome an energetic New York woman, is their President as she is also the founder of the Order. With Oct. 1st Mrs. Bottome takes up the editorial pen and becomes one of the editors of The Home Journal, in which periodical she will hereafter write and edit a department entirely devoted to the best interests of "The King's Daughters." Through this channel it is Mrs. Bottome's intention that her "daughters" and herself shall come closer together in feeling and sympathy.

—Henry Irvin was arrested on Wednesday, handcuffed and put in jail. He has suddenly become insane and will be kept in confinement until he shall be legally and properly disposed of by a jury. This is the second time he has been insane. It has not been a great while since he was released from the Danville asylum. He went from there to Potter county and on Tuesday arrived in Bellefonte and at once displayed signs of insanity. Centre county is his home. He will likely be sent back to Danville.

Death of Jesse Klinger.

The residents of West Bellefonte were shocked this morning to hear that Mr. Jesse Klinger, of West High street, was dead. The gentleman had always enjoyed good health until last Friday when he was taken ill and for a few days has been confined to his bed, but no one anticipated a fatal termination, hence were greatly shocked when it was announced that he died this morning. Deceased 73 years old.

No Choice Yet.

Special to the Tribune.

EBENSBURG, Pa., Oct. 1.—Over seventy-five ballots have been cast and the conference is now in session with no nomination in immediate prospect. Some talk of an adjournment is indulged in, but this is not likely to take place until a nomination is made. Mr. Scull is still absent and the conference may be unable to agree until he is present. This can hardly be before Friday next.

An Aged Family.

Mrs. Reynolds, of Rebersburg, a few days ago celebrated her 91st birthday. Her sister, Mrs. Jacob Wolfe, mother of William and John Wolfe, now aged 88, walked about one mile, to visit her sister Mrs. Reynolds on her 91st birthday. Mrs. John Gast, another sister, is now 86 years of age. Mrs. Paul Wolfe, another sister, and mother of Mrs. Jacob Dinge of this place, is now 82 years of age, and Mrs. Henry Gast, of Mifflinburg, who is 84 years of age. This family of Gasts was composed of ten children, of whom five are dead and five living as given above. The dead are, Mrs. Crotzer, over 80 years when she died; Adam Gast died over 90 years of age; George Gast over 85 years when he died; Mrs. Tate about 75 years when her death occurred, and Mrs. Couser was over 85 years old.—Centre Reporter.

At the Opera House To-morrow Night.

Although the audience at the Opera house last night was none of the largest that greeted James Reilly in the beautiful play of "The Broom-maker of Carlsbad," it nevertheless was an appreciative one, as a performance was given that is seldom surpassed, and the demonstrations of popular favor were quite pronounced. Mr. Reilly, as Johann, made a capital Dutch comedian, and his finished acting was only surpassed by his exquisite singing. He possesses a good voice, and this he has under complete control in singing his heart-touching and pathetic songs. His yoding was exceptionally fine, and his rendition of "Hush, Baby Sleep," (a lullaby) "She's the Best One of Them All," "Think of Your Mother at Home, Boy," were as touching as they were beautiful, but the gem of the evening was his song "How to Make a Broom" in which he was supported by little Hans and Etta, who captivated the audience with their acting and singing. We but voice the sentiment of the audience present last evening when we state that if Mr Reilly should see fit to give us a return visit the opera house would be crowded from pit to dome.—Lebanon Pa., Daily News.

Better Protection For Letters.

In a recent English divorce case it was stated that a certain letter of an eminently confidential character was opened and read in the kitchen. The simple procedure was to hold the envelope over a boiling kettle and relax the gum. That should be a warning to everybody who does not wish his private correspondence to become the talk of his servants. The wonder is that so many persons are contented with the modern envelope. Made with thick paper and bad gum, it often flies open even without the assistance of a boiling kettle. Letters should be protected with a wax seal.

A Good Show—Every Body Delighted.

As will be seen by announcements, Walter L. Main's Great International Shows are soon to exhibit here. Concerning this admirable entertainment the St. Clairsville, Ohio, Chronicle of May 17, 1888, says: "Walter L. Main's show is one of a superior order of excellence. Every thing about it was bright and clean. All the features were good. The tent was packed and every body was greatly delighted. This show is now consolidated with the great Van Amburgh show, but the admission price remains the same."

—*H*ere is a suggestion that is worth considering: Everybody knows what a misery it is to wrestle with a new collar in the effort to get it buttoned, but not everybody knows that a new collar or cuff can be buttoned as easily as an old one if you only have the knack of doing it. Dip the tip of your finger in a glass of water and wet the buttonhole, and in an instant it is soft and pliable; put on the collar, and as soon as the linen round the buttonhole dries it will set to the shape of the button-shank and hold the collar firmly to its place.

—Several of our people attended the "Irish Corporal" at Bellefonte, Monday night, and made their entrance into that town riding a rail. The side bar of the carriage broke and a fence rail was put into service.—Centre Hall Reporter. Yes and if a certain young man from that "neck o' woods" isn't a little more careful he will some day, or night rather, make his exit from Bellefonte "a ridin on a rail."

—Mr. Jesse Klinger died on his 73rd birthday, he having been born on the first day of October, 1807. He lived three years more than the allotted three score and ten, but his life was a useful one and his death will be universally lamented. The funeral of deseased will occur to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock, services to be held in the Reformed church.

JENKS' DREAM.

Jenks had a queer dream the other night. He thought he saw a prize-fighters' ring, and in the middle of it stood a doughty little champion who met and deliberately knocked over, one by one, a score or more of big, burly-looking fellows, as they advanced to the attack. Giants as they were in size, the valiant pigmy proved more than a match for them. It was all so funny that Jenks woke up laughing. He accounts for the dream by the fact that he had just come to the conclusion, after trying nearly every big, drastic pill on the market, that Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets, or tiny Sugar-coated Granules, easily "knock out" and beat all the big pills hollow! They are the original and only genuine Little Liver Pills.

Beware of Imitations, which contain Poisonous Minerals. Always ask for Dr. Pierce's Pellets, which are Little Sugar-coated Pills, or Anti-bilious Granules. One a Dose.

THE PRESIDENT'S TRIP.

Gen. Grosvenor and Consul General New Join the Party.

A TALK AT LAWRENCEBURG.

President Harrison Addresses the Crowd from the Car Platform and Was Visibly Affected as He Spoke of the Scenes of His Childhood.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 8.—The president arrived at Cincinnati Tuesday morning promptly at 7:30. His car was held in the station only long enough for the change of engines necessary for the transfer from the Chesapeake and Ohio to the Ohio and Mississippi road. There were crowds at all the small stations before the train reached Cincinnati, and at Newport there was a band and drum corps, but the train made no stops except at Covington, where the president stood on the rear platform for a few minutes and listened to the familiar strains of "Hail to the Chief." Breakfast was served in the president's car while the train was in the station here. The president received a number of visitors before breakfast, among them his nephew, Archibald Eaton, of Cincinnati.

At Lawrenceburg.

LAWRENCEBURG, Ind., Oct. 8. — Gen. Grosvenor, of Ohio, and the consul general to London, John C. New, joined the president's party at Cincinnati. The local committee from Lawrenceburg was in waiting there to act as escort to the presidential party. The president's car was attached to a special train composed of an engine and a combination car. Only one stop was made between Cincinnati and Lawrenceburg. The train slowed up for a minute at North Bend in sight of the tomb of William Henry Harrison and the house where the president was born. At Lawrenceburg a large crowd was in waiting. The president addressed the crowd from the rear platform as follows:

The President's Speech.

"My friends, I want to thank you very cordially for this greeting. All the views about here are very familiar. This town of Lawrenceburg is the first village of my childish recollection, and as I have approached it this morning, past the earliest home of my recollection, the home in which my childhood and early manhood were spent, memories crowd in upon me that are very full of interest, very full of pleasure and yet very full of sadness. They bring back to me those who ever made the old home very dear, the most precious spot on earth. I have passed with bowed head the place where they rest.

"We are here in our generation with the work of those who have gone before us; let us see each of us that in the family, in the neighborhood and the state we do at least with equal grace, courage and kindness the work which was so bravely, kindly and graciously done by those who filled our places fifty years ago.

"Now, for I must hurry on to those old friends and to these new friends who have come in since Lawrenceburg was familiar to me, I extend again my hearty thanks for this welcome."

In conclusion the president introduced Secretary Tracy. The president was visibly affected as he spoke of the scenes of his childhood.

At North Vernon.

NORTH VERNON, Ind., Oct. 8.—Between Lawrenceburg and North Vernon no regular stops were made. There were large crowds at Aurora, Milan, Osgood and other stations, and the train slowed up for a minute at each of these places to give the president an opportunity to bow his acknowledgment of the greeting.

A telegram was received from A. C. Dawes, of St. Joseph, asking that the president stop at that city Friday morning. An affirmative reply was sent, and the president will stop at St. Joseph at 7 o'clock, remaining for an hour. The party will arrive at Topeka at 9:30 instead of 8 a. m. Friday.

A Notable Body of Clergymen.

BROOKLYN, Oct. 8.—The annual anniversaries and convention of the various societies of the Free Baptist church began Tuesday afternoon, and will be continued Wednesday and Thursday at the Baptist church, Marcy avenue and Keap street. Delegates are present from all parts of the country, including one from India. After a dinner had been served in the school room attached to the church the convention was opened at 2:30 p. m., with half an hour's devotional exercises, which were led by the Rev. F. L. Hayes, of Boston. It was a notable body of clergymen that made up the convention. At 3 o'clock the meeting was called together for organization, and the annual election of officers will follow later. The programme for the convention includes addresses to be made by many of the most notable of Baptist ministers in the country.

Burned to a Crisp.

MIDDLETON, Conn., Oct. 8.—The house occupied by Jehell Tryon and wife, an aged couple, was destroyed by fire, and Mrs. Tryon was burned to a crisp. Mr. Tryon, though badly burned, managed to crawl to the pig pen, where he was found by a neighbor this morning. It is thought they will cannot recover. The fire was caused by the upsetting of a kerosene lamp. The house was located on the outskirts of the city. Mrs. Tryon was nearly 80 years old, and her husband is a few years older.

A Daring Robbery.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 8.—A daring robbery was committed at Rosedale, a suburb of this city. A robber entered the store of William Mann when the store was full of customers, drew his revolver and leveling it at the proprietor's head ordered him to hand over the money in the cash drawer and safe. Mann was paralyzed by fear and the customers by surprise. The proprietor handed over the cash, $250 in all, and the robber escaped.

Her Cargo of Cotton Ablaze.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—The steamer Alamo, of the Mallory line, arrived here Tuesday morning from Galveston with her cargo of cotton on fire. After landing her passengers in safety by means of a tug she proceeded to the Erie basin, where her hold was flooded by the fire tugs. She has 5,000 bales of cotton on board.

Hans S. Beattie Probably Dying.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—Street Commissioner Hans S. Beattie is now lying very ill at his residence, No. 335 West Thirty-first street, with an attack of pneumonia, and no one is allowed to converse with him. It is feared he will die.

THE SYNDICATE GOT IT.

English Capitalists Succeed in Buying John Roach's Ship Yards.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 8.—The syndicate of English capitalists known as Roach's Ship Building and Engineering company, limited, which was organized in England last June, and which made an offer to buy John Roach's ship building yards at Chester, Pa., repeated their offer Monday, and it has been accepted.

The company has a capital of £500,000, and the securities are divided into preference shares amounting to £300,000 in 6 per cent. bonds of $20 each.

All the shares of stock have been taken in England except about £50,000, which will be taken in this country. Charles D Freeman & Co., at No. 7 Wall street, New York, have charge of the stock in this country. The names of the Americans thus far who will be interested are John B. Roach, president of the Delaware River Iron Ship Building and Engine works George E. Weed, president of the Morgar Iron works, and William Rowland, a capitalist of Philadelphia.

There will be seven English directors. The bank interested in England is the National Bank of Scotland. There is a firm of solicitors in London, and Cary & Whitridge, of New York, will look after the interests in this country. It is estimated that the yards originally cost $1,400,000.

The whole property has been appraised by E. B. Ellice-Clark, Francis S. Bowles, the naval constructor of the United States government; George H. Scott, president of the New York real estate exchange, and Samuel A. Dyer, president of the Chester National bank. They made two valuations, the first being $3,357,261 and the second $3,695,261. Mr. Roach was seen at his office in Chester, and said that as soon as the English capitalists arrive with the money he will make the transfer.

Speaker Daniels' Life in Danger.

GUTHRIE, O. T., Oct. 8.—The excitement here over the capital location question still continues. President of the Senate Garnshire will not sign the bill locating the capital in Oklahoma City, inasmuch as Speaker Daniels contests the legality of his own signature. The question was not brought up in the lower house yesterday, it being deemed unwise on account of the excitement at present, owing to the possibilities of a conflict between the opposing forces. Speaker Daniels went to Oklahoma City, his home, last Saturday, and has not returned to Guthrie. A dispatch from that place says that he is in fear of losing his life should he return during the present excitement, and that he has received several anonymous letters threatening his life should he ever return to Guthrie.

Shot Dead for a Burglar.

ITHACA, N. Y., Oct. 8.—There have been numerous burglaries in the northern part of this county within the past two weeks, and the people have become much excited concerning them. At North Lansing Mrs. Samuel Atwater got up last night to extinguish a light which had been left burning to keep away burglars. Her son-in-law, Walter Havens, heard her moving about, and mistaking her for a burglar shot her dead. Mr. Havens is a collector for a southern firm, and frequently has large sums of money in the house.

Crushed in a Railroad Wreck.

PENDLETON, Ore., Oct. 8.—No. 4 passenger train was wrecked near Celito. The engine and tender were thrown from the track and badly wrecked, and the mail car was thrown off. Fireman Howard was caught between the engine and tender and badly crushed. He cannot live. The engineer was badly bruised. George Long, who was in the cab, was badly hurt. The passengers were much bruised. The accident was caused by sand on the track.

Want Him Extradited.

CAMDEN, N. J., Oct. 8.—The application of the Kansas City authorities was made to Governor Abbett at Trenton for the extradition of C. A. Benson, alias Fulton, charged with the Mettman murder in Kansas City. Governor Abbett was not satisfied with the papers, and laid the application for consideration over. The governor said the application papers did not recite the indictment of Benson, and the prisoner denied the charge.

Connecticut Elections.

HARTFORD, Conn., Oct. 8.—Returns from about half the towns in the state show nearly the usual quantity of changes. In Hartford county the Democratic gains seem on these returns to outnumber the Republicans, while in New Haven county it is the other way. Returns from the eastern part of the state are meager. In general the vote was light. It looks as if the voting had been almost wholly on local issues.

President Monroe a Fraud.

CHICAGO, Oct. 8.—Frank L. Monroe, president of the Interstate Publishing company, was arrested for obtaining money under false pretenses, and turned over to an officer from Springfield, where, it is alleged, the offense was committed. It is said that he induced a number of persons to subscribe for certain publications, and advance $50 each for subscription outfits which he has never sent to them.

ACCUSED BY HIS SISTER.

The Trial of Arthur Day, of Rochester, for Wife Murder.

FLUNG OVER A PRECIPICE.

After Telling the Fearful Story of the Crime the Accused Man's Sister Broke Down Completely and Sobbed in a Pitiful Manner.

WELLAND, Ont., Oct. 8.—The trial of Arthur Day, of Rochester, for the murder of his wife on July 27 last was begun in the county court Tuesday morning, before Justice Rose. The crown is represented by ex-Deputy Attorney General F. F. B. Johnstone, and the prisoner by William German, of this place. Great interest is taken in the case, and the town is filled with curious visitors. The crown has made a very complete case against the prisoner. The line the defense will take, it is said, will be an attempt to break down Mrs. Quigley's evidence and to show that Mrs. Day was insane and given to fits of despondency. The defense will also try to prove that Mrs. Day had at various times threatened to commit suicide, and that she voluntarily jumped over the cliff.

A Farmer Jury.

When court opened the court room was filled to its utmost capacity. The task of securing a jury occupied only a few minutes, there being but one challenge. The jurors are all farmers.

The prisoner was dressed with more than usual care and wore a small flower in his buttonhole.

Mr. Johnstone opened the case for the crown. He told the jury briefly the story of the crime. His address occupied thirty-five minutes.

Mrs. Quigley, of Rochester, sister of the prisoner, was then sworn. Her answers came slowly at first, but as she proceeded in her evidence she brightened up and her answers became more rapid. The following is her story:

The Sister's Story.

"I remember being at the falls in July last. My brother asked me to go there with him, offering to pay my fare. I asked him was his wife going, and he said yes. We went to the Erie depot, where we were joined by Mrs. Day. We then found we would have to take the New York Central, and so we went by that road. We had dinner at the Falls. Then we took the street car to the lower Suspension bridge, which we crossed, and started for the whirlpool.

"When we reached the point overlooking the whirlpool I sat down to rest, as my feet were swollen. About twenty minutes afterward I saw a shadow pass behind me, which must have been my brother and his wife. The next I saw of them they were standing on the bridge, about three to five minutes' walk away from me in the direction where we came from.

A Dramatic Scene.

"How were they standing?"

"One behind the other. My brother was behind Desire. I was standing looking at the river. The next time he looked he was waving to me with a black handkerchief, and I walked up to where he was."

"What did he say when you walked up to him?"

All eyes in the court room were turned upon the witness intently. She was silent for a few moments. A pin could be heard drop. Suddenly her eyes were filled with tears, and she broke out sobbing and weeping.

"Well, if I must tell, I must," she exclaimed, and looking straight at her brother (the prisoner) she said: He said: 'I have shoved her over. She never moved, and never knew what struck her.'"

Then the witness broke down entirely, bowed her head on the rail of the witness box and sobbed pitifully.

The Prisoner Unmoved.

It was some moments before witness could proceed. The prisoner was perfectly unmoved. Mrs. Quigley then told the story of their return to Rochester; how each had taken the same train, but sat in different cars. She said she only saw her brother once—in Buffalo, when he gave her her ticket for Rochester—but did not speak to him. She did not see him again till one day in Rochester. The 7-year-old child of Desire was with her. The little girl said, "Is mamma home?" and he said, "I rather guess not," with a smile.

She then identified the dress taken from the body of deceased. She identified the hat found near the body and other articles of clothing.

A recess was then taken.

Iron Kings in Pennsylvania.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 8.—The visit of the iron and steel delegates was brought to a close in this city by a brilliant reception at the Academy of Fine Arts. Today the excursionists started on their western trip, visiting the cities of Lebanon, Altoona and Johnstown on their way to Pittsburg. Among the places visited by various parties of the delegates yesterday are Phœnixville, Chester, Camden, N. J., and Wilmington, Del.

Blown Ashore in a Gale.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—The fishing smack Scotia and the American brig Torchlight were driven ashore at Sandy Hook point by the gale which prevailed there. The smack is a total loss. Her crew were saved by the life saving crew at the point. The Torchlight was hauled off by the tug Zouave. She was leaking badly and the cargo is greatly damaged.

Short in His Accounts.

BUFFALO, Oct. 8.—John H. Neill, of the grocery firm of John H. Neill & Co., has fled from the city, and is about $10,000 short in his accounts. Hiram Waltz, a wealthy live stock dealer, was the backer of the firm, and will have to make good the shortage. Waltz says that in his opinion Neill got into fast company and squandered the money.

Three Thousand Women Voted.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Oct. 8.—The returns from all the polls of the school election here show that about 3,000 women voted instead of 500, as at first stated. This is said to be the best record outside of Boston.

Must Die by Electricity.

ALBANY, Oct. 8.—The court of appeals Tuesday affirmed the decision of the lower court in the case of Schihiok Jugigo, the Japanese murderer.

LITERALLY BATHED IN BLOOD.

A Drinking Bout Between Men and Women Winds Up in Murder.

CHICAGO, Oct. 8.—John St. John, a shoemaker, 33 years old, was shot and killed by Marshal Demars, a saloon keeper at 219 Halsted street, early Tuesday morning. St. John, the saloonkeeper, and his wife and Mrs. Benson, the saloonkeeper's sister, had been drinking together for hours. A drunken row occurred, and Demars shot St. John twice in the head. Either wound would have been fatal. One bullet entered the forehead and the other plowed its way through the left jaw.

When the officer entered the saloon he found St. John lying on the floor. Mrs. Benson was bending over him, and with her arms around his neck was being literally bathed in the blood that flowed from his wounds. She was drunk, and refused to be taken away from the dead man. Mrs. Demars was also drunk, but the saloonkeeper appeared to be sober. Both women and the men were arrested.

WILL FLY THE BRITISH FLAG.

Our Vigorous Foreign Policy Forces American Sealers to Adopt This Course.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 8.—All American sealers who hunted in Behring sea last season will fly the British flag next year. Mr. Blaine's "vigorous foreign policy" is the cause of the move.

The American sealers claim that most unjust discrimination is made against them in Behring sea. The revenue cutters compel them to work outside the nine mile limit under pain of seizure in the event of trespass.

British sealers have been advised by representatives of their government that they would not be molested, and consequently they run right up to the rookeries and do as they please as long as they do not actually set foot on shore. This puts Americans under a big disadvantage, and their catches in Behring sea haven't come near those of the British.

A Murderer's Cool Trick.

GREENVILLE, S. C., Oct. 8.—"Bill" Howard, who is under sentence of death for the murder of a confederate in the moonshine whisky business over a year ago, has just escaped from prison here. Howard's wife was allowed to spend the night in the cell with her husband. In the morning Howard dressed in his wife's clothing, came down the stairs of the prison with an infant in his arms, and leaving the baby at a relative's house fled before the jailer had discovered the trick that had been played on him. Mrs. Howard, who is a buxom mountain girl of 17 years, now occupies the cell vacated by her husband.

Patriotic Sons in Session.

BOSTON, Oct. 8.—The National camp, Patriotic Sons of America, opened a three days' session in Faneuil hall Tuesday. The representation to which the convention is entitled is about 225 delegates from the various camps. Of this number considerably more than half were present when the meeting was called to order shortly before 12 o'clock. Past National President H. J. Stager, of Philadelphia, called the meeting to order. After the appointment of a committee on credentials an adjournment was taken.

Two Schooners Lost.

HALIFAX, N. S., Oct. 8.—The direct mail steamer from St. Johns, N. F., brings the intelligence that two schooners have been lost at Labrador, the Lily, Babson master, owned by John Steer, and the Belle, owned by Paul L. Lessier. The crews were saved. Also that the schooner Eugene had arrived at St. Johns from the Banks with the crew of the schooner Mary, belonging to A. Goodridge & Son, which had been wrecked in a storm.

Rode Him on a Rail.

PLEASANTVILLE, N. J., Oct. 8.—The air is full of rumors arising out of the raid by White Caps in Absecom on John Newman. A notice was posted on his door Sunday warning him to discharge his housekeeper. He disregarded it, and after midnight yesterday morning he was taken from his house and ridden around town on a rail. Others are threatened with similar treatment.

Hanging from the Gas Fixtures.

BROOKLYN, Oct. 8.—Tunis V. Palmer, 33 years of age, who was engaged in the undertaking business, committed suicide by hanging himself to the gas fixtures in his apartments at 382 Seventh avenue. His wife, to whom he was greatly attached, died a year ago. He leaves two daughters, aged 6 and 9 years, unprovided for.

A Brand New Comet.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Oct. 8.—A faint comet was discovered by Professor E. E. Barnard, at the Lick observatory, at 8 o'clock, 46 minutes, Monday evening. Its position was R. A. 19 hours, 12 minutes, 26 degrees south. motion easterly

Ex-Mayor Perrin Dead.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Oct. 8.—Andrew N. Perrin, a retired oil magnate and ex-mayor of Titusville, died here Tuesday morning, aged 51 years.

Stabbed Him Five Times.

ERLANGER, Ky., Oct. 8.—Louis Richards and Tom Edwards, two wealthy farmers living at Beach Grove, about two miles south of here, met on Florence and Independence pike, when a dispute arose regarding damage done Edwards by Richards' hogs getting into his fields. Edwards struck Richards, when the latter drew his knife and stabbed Edwards five times, killing him.

St. Jacobs Oil Cures

PROMPTLY AND PERFECTLY

BRUISES, SWELLINGS, CUTS, &c.

A bruise is a contusion; swellings are inflammations; cuts and wounds are alike disturbances to natural action, through which the veins are clogged, circulation impeded, congestion sets in and pains ensue. Nature is impatient—it tries to right itself and pain intensifies. Bruises and swellings need a soothing influence, but in cuts and wounds hardly any one would pour a liquid remedy into a gaping wound. So soon as nature brings the parts together, almost at once,

St. Jacobs Oil soothes clears away obstructions, heals the injured tissues and restores. Used according to directions, it helps nature and cures

PROMPTLY AND PERMANENTLY.

Mr. Louis Rush, 49 Preston Street, Detroit, Mich., says: "Pitching ball I sprained and bruised my arm; two applications of St. Jacobs Oil cured me."

Mr. Gustav Nauwald, Jr. (Tivydale), Fredericksburg, Texas, writes, August 20, 1888: "I was badly cut with a scythe; half bottle St. Jacobs Oil cured me." It CURES.

The Show To-day.

Main & Van Amburgh's circus and menagerie arrived in town this morning and at once went to work to fit up for this afternoon's performance. The parade occurred between 12 and 1 o'clock and was presented a very creditable showing, considering that the wagons had been driven all the way from Lock Haven through the mud. Last week they were in Carbondale and the Leader of that place has the following to say of the performance given there.

Those who invested in the circus yesterday got their money's worth and more of a good, old-time, one ring show. The tents were filled both afternoon and evening, and the performance was clean and of uniform excellence throughout. There were trained animals in abundance—horses, donkeys' ponies, dogs, an elephant and last but not least, a performing goat which among other feats stood on the top of its trainer's head while the man stood on a chair and turned around. Among the many noteworthy features was a knife thrower who deftly cast the heavy blades each side and around the head of a woman standing against a boarded background; a very dangerous feat to attempt as a miscalculation of half an inch would cause a probably fatal injury to the foolhardy woman who daily makes herself a target. The performance of two Japanese, one of whom postured at the top of a pole thirty feet high, while the other balanced it in his hands, was very skillful. The tumblers were super excellent, one of whom was a pretty young girl who is grace itself. A two horse bareback act, ridden by a young lady and boy, was greatly admired for its daring.

We have every reason to believe that all who attend the performance this afternoon and evening will go away fully satiified that they have got the worth of their money.

There's not a joy the earth can give, like the sudden surcease of violent and terrible pain. It is like the rest at the gates of Paradise, but how can it be found? It is the simplest matter in the world. Buy a bottle of Salvation Oil and rub it in.

—A woman stepped into the store of an Oil City merchant, one day recently, and told him that she stole a hood for a child from the store in the year 1874, and the theft had weighed on her conscience ever since. She paid for the hood, and was freely forgiven for the crime which she freely confessed.

Shaken out of Gear.

By malarial disease, the human machinery cannot half perform its office. Digestion, secretion, evacuation are disordered, the blood becomes watery, the nerves feeble, the countenance ghastly, sleep disturbed and appetite capricious. Terrible is the disease, fell its consequences. There is, however, a known antidote to the miasmatic poison, and a certain safeguard against it. In malarious regions of our South and West, in South America, Guatemala and on the Isthmus of Panama as well as in transmarine countries where the scourge exists this inimitable preventative and remedy, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, has during the last thirty-five years, been constantly widening the area of its usefulness, and demonstrating its sovereign value. Liver complaint, dyspepsia, constipation, kidney trouble, rheumatism and debility are all remedied by it,

Twenty-Three Years in the Drug Business.

I have been a druggist twenty-three years, and have sold all the patent medicines which are known in this country, and can truthfully say that I have never known a remedy for Blood Diseases of more value than S S S [Swift's Specific]. Mr A., a customer, was troubled with an eruption of the skin on the back of his hands, and had in vain sought relief of the best local medical talent, also of some of the most noted specialists in New York, and as a last resort spent some months in Paris, France, under treatment of the physicians there, and had secured only temporary relief. After all this treatment he was finally cured, sound and well, by Swift's Specific.

Another customer, Mr. B., had suffered for many year with Blood Poison, and thought he had been cured by mercurial treatment, but the disease returned, accompanied by Rheumatism of a bad type. A dozen small bottles of S S S made a perfect and lasting cure.

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation, curative power superior to any other article. A Boston lady who knew what she wanted, and whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

To Get

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was. I had taken it, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other.

Hood's

When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable, suffering a great deal with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked, and had for some time, like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." MRS. ELLA A. Mr. Meyer has some very damaging evidence against him and is piling up more very day.

Merit Wins.

We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits.

Again it affords us much pleasure to be able to record the fact that the Pittsburg Exposition opened its doors promptly as advertised. The many things to be seen are worthy of much of our space, but we will dwell only on one exhibit, the only one of its kind at the great show. Well may we say it is worthy of comment. His Silver Age Rye stands on a pyramid high enough to overlook all other displays ; the bbs, and cases show at once the extent of his trades, conveying the impression that he ships to all parts of the country. His Pennsylvania Rye Whiskies, his imported and domestic wines, brandies and cordials are prominent features. No other liquor house in the country would dare to compete with him in making a display, and no other house in his line can or will sell goods as pure and at such reasonable prices. THE EXILES

A RUSSIAN STORY.

Yegor and the Parisian signed to each other not to disturb him. On partially turning, Yermac saw upon the table, which M Lafleur had righted, all sorts of provisions arranged in good order.

"So the nartas have arrived!" cried he joyously, springing to his feet.

"No," said M. Lafleur. "We brought all those things here a little while ago."

"Where did you get them?" asked he, in astonishment.

"Ah! do not ask me!" answered the Parisian, repeating the chief of police's words of a minute before. He even added the intonation.

Yermac understood, and, relapsing into silence, resumed his place beside the fire.

We will now throw some light on the mystery surrounding his absence from the hut for an entire day and a large portion of the night.

The chief of police, despairing of again seeing Tekel and Chort, had resolved to try to escape on foot. He started immediately after the departure of Yegor and M. Lafleur for the chase, taking with him only the supply of seal fat he had kept in reserve After walking for five or six hours in the exceedingly bitter cold, covered with heavy clothing, he paused, uncertain as to whether he should continue his journey or not.

Foxes, attracted by the odor of the seal fat, pressed thickly about him. He threatened them with his stick, but without driving them very far away. It was a bad beginning. The wind commenced to blow strongly. What a prospect for the night! Where should he sleep! If he stretched himself out in the midst of the toundra, the foxes would carry off his provisions and, perhaps, attack him. Without food, no journey, no escape, was possible. Was he even certain of the route he was following! The sky was covered with clouds, and there were no stars to guide him. There was not a tree from the moss on the bark of which he could ascertain the four cardinal points. His attempt seemed to him worse than foolish. Never, under such conditions, could he reach Nijni-Kolimsk.

Far better would it be to retrace his steps and try to find the road he had passed over. That was what he did. He disembarrassed himself of the greater part of his provisions upon which the foxes immediately threw themselves, and, a trifle less loaded, regained the coast, making an error which brought him to the ocean several miles from the hut. But once there, he discovered his whereabouts from the configuration of the capes and bays.

A few hours later, he ran against the wooden cross which marked the grave of his son. He knelt upon the tomb. When he arose, he had no difficulty in finding the hut, which was almost buried in the snow, but from the roof of which escaped a cloud of smoke reflecting the flames of the hearth.

Yegor and M. Lafleur, finding, the next day, that the slices of seal fat put aside by the chief of police were gone, and accepting as sincere his surprise and even pain when he discovered the absence of Nadege and the lad, suspected the truth.

What an immense task was now imposed upon them! They must find Nadege and Ladislas and snatch them from the hands of their abductors. Yegor could not pursue his attempt, so courageously carried on up to that time, before having attained this result.

CHAPTER XXXI.—THE PURSUIT.

After a night passed without sleep—the three men had remained seated about the fire in silence—Yegor and M. Lafleur ran to the tracks of the narta—they were still perfectly visible. Yegor's dog barked in the direction taken by the sledge and then began to run that they might follow it; the animal returned and again went through the same manœuvre.

"Thanks to Wab," said M. Lafleur, "we will find them!"

"I hope so," cried Yegor; "but shall we abandon the hut, go forward, taking Yermac with us, and pursue our journey towards the Gulf of Anadyr when we have recovered Nadege and Ladislas!"

"And what of the expected nartas in that case!" said M. Lafleur. "What would become of our guides! Besides, can we undertake such a journey on foot! No; believe me. Let us leave the hut in charge of the chief of police and set out with as little baggage as possible. We will return here."

They returned to the hut and hastily made their preparations, deciding to take but a small quantity of food with them. But they did not forget their weapons—Yegor his gun and pistols and the Parisian the hatchet found on board the whaler, which he took to replace his gun broken over the skull of the white bear.

At the moment of departure, Yegor told Yermac that he could dispose of the food contained in the hut.

"You insist uselessly, Monsieur Semenoff," said the chief of police. "I would rather die of hunger than to touch it. But will you not satisfy my curiosity by telling me where you procured those provisions!"

"I will tell you," said Yegor, "and the information will, perhaps, remove your repugnance."

He then told him of the discovery of the whaling vessel.

"But," said the chief of police, "the contents of the ship must be saved. What is its name!"

"I do not know."

"That is, however, what must be known first of all. I will discover it. I will make a note of the place from whence the ship sailed; the owners shall be informed of what has happened and shall, in a certain measure, be indemnified by our government, provided the supplies, appendages, utensils, arms, hull and masts can be sold at Nijni-Kolimsk or the fair of Ostrovoye—but that is impossible; we can only make use of the abandoned food, and that in a very small quantity according to our needs."

"You consent then to utilize the resources furnished us by the whaler!"

"Certainly. This time it is for the account of the government of the Czar, which will pay for what is used."

"Arrange that to suit yourself, Monsieur Yermac," said Yegor; "the most important point is that you may not suffer and [illegible] and that I can leave you here [illegible] days feeling certain that on my return I shall find you alive."

Yermac might have shown himself sensible of the interest Yegor took in him, had he been a man to indulge in amiable words. As it was, he was for a moment embarrassed and, to relieve himself, turned his back to Yegor.

Satisfied in regard to the chief of police, Yegor started on his journey, accompanied by M. Lafleur. Wab ran on before, without straying too far from the coast.

Soon they perceived to the east, and at a distance of more than sixty miles, Mounts Vayvanine, Geyla and Raoutane, as well as the pointed rocks of Cape Chelagsk. The dog led them towards the south-west, across abrupt earthy hillocks and frozen lakes. At night, they halted for a few hours on the snow, having nothing with them that could soften the rigors of such a sojourn.

The next day, they passed through a district cut up by great numbers of deep lakes of different sizes, separated from each other by a kind of natural dykes, not more than an inch thick and formed, as well as the soil, of never melting ice covered with a little earth. After a toilsome walk, they finally reached the western shore of the Bay of Tchaounsk.

Still guided by Wab and themselves, continuing to follow the tracks of the sledge on the snow, they went along the sides of the hills parallel to the coast, over a narrow strip of sand on which they noticed remains of sea-kale with large leaves and of some other marine plants.

An east wind was blowing impetuously. The sky was clear. At noon, a celestial phenomenon of extraordinary beauty attracted their attention and stopped them, for an instant, in the midst of their breathless and toilsome career. Around the sun appeared four other suns connected with each other by brilliant rainbows of the most vivid colors; the whole formed a circle the diameter of which equalled forty degrees; besides, a horizontal rainbow, about eighty degrees long, passed across the real sun and the apparent suns which surrounded it; at its extremities arose perpendicularly two little rainbows, the very pale hues of which contrasted with those of the main one. This phenomenon lasted two hours. The wind abated little by little and then snow fell, being converted into a snow hurricane of medium intensity.

Yegor and M. Lafleur sheltered themselves as best they could, but were filled with dismay to see fall the fresh snow which would efface the traces borne by the old. Would the dog again find the scent! When the tempest had ceased, Wab was stimulated by them to go forward. The dog at first seemed altogether at fault; it followed and abandoned successively several scents; finally, it seemed to have made up its mind, and Yegor, who had commenced to despair and give way to all his chagrin, regained confidence. He and his companion decided to trust to the animal's instinct, and resumed their journey.

Meanwhile, the chief of police had gone in search of the whaler, and, remembering Yegor's description, he found it without difficulty. His first care was, as he had said, to ascertain the name of the ship. It was the Hugo and Maria.

He had already copied the names of the captain, the second in command, and the crew from the Bible secured by Yegor. He drew up an inventory of all the material and supplies the whaler contained. This done, he began to transport to the hut everything that was neither too heavy nor too embarrassing, making trip after trip, indefatigable in this work of preservation which he had almost as much at heart as success in bringing back the fugitive exiles to Yakoutsk.

Whoever could have seen him, wrapped up in his skin garments, his head covered with a fur hood descending to the base of his neck, a hatchet and an auger stuck in his leather belt, a keg under his arm and a gun on his shoulder, and, besides, finding the means to drag after him a saw, a sack of biscuit and packages of cartridges, would certainly have taken him for an Arctic Robinson Crusoe.

One evening, the Yakoute guides arrived, making a great noise with their thirty-two dogs and awakening the echoes of the Polar Sea. Yermac was overjoyed; he could return to his plan of escape, and, this time, under much better conditions, thanks to Yegor's absence. Only one thing clouded his elation and that was his inability to take back the fugitives with him. But he knew their route; from Yakoutsk, by employing the government couriers, it was possible to spread the alarm over the entire coast of the Pacific Ocean bordering upon the Gulf of Anadyr. In the spring, Yegor and his companions would reach this locality only to be captured.

The guides, to whom Yermac related in his own fashion the abduction of Nadege and little Ladislas, and the departure of Yegor Semenoff and M. Lafleur in search of them, thought that their employers would never find their way back to the hut, or that, finding themselves brought by their pursuit nearer the Pacific than the Arctic Ocean, they would not retrace their steps. They seemed, therefore, to consent easily enough to what the chief of police desired. They, however, demanded three or four days to reach a final decision; this time, besides, was necessary to rest the dogs.

Yermac, on the point of realizing his hopes, resolved to utilize these few days. He brought away from the whaler, with the aid of a narta drawn by several dogs, which were replaced by others on completing each trip, everything that had a commercial value if taken to Nijni-Kolimsk, especially the powder, the harpoons, and the arms. Afterwards, he caused to be buried near the spot where his son reposed the bones gathered up here and there on the deck and in the between-decks of the vessel, thus carrying out Yegor's pious intentions.

CHAPTER.—XXXII.—NADEGE AMONG THE TCHOUKTCHIS.

Three hundred and fifty miles to the east of the Bay of Tchaounsk is situated the Bay of Kolioutchine, where the Vega wintered from the 27th of September, 1878, until the 18th of July of the following year.

Everybody now knows the surprising history of the expedition commanded by Nordenskiold, the result of which was the revelation of the existence of a north-east passage. It is certainly the greatest geographical achievement since the discovery of America.

It is known by all how the Swedish savant, after several voyages of exploration to the north of Russia and Siberia, succeeded in reaching Behring's Strait and the great ocean, thus demonstrating the truth of a very ingenious hypothesis, namely: that along the coast of Siberia was a navigable channel, caused by the abundant warm waters discharged during the summer by the vast Asiatic rivers.

Nordenskiold, while wintering ten months in the Bay of Kolioutchine, lived among the Tchouktchis, a people very little known now, long feared by the other Siberian tribes with whom they came in contact, and whose reputation for ferocity has, no doubt, been greatly exaggerated.

The illustrious Swedish traveler was not the first to penetrate into the Tchouktchi peninsula. In 1823, Lieutenant Wrangel, of the Russian navy, since admiral, went as far as the Island of Kolioutchine, and even before the Russian navigator, the celebrated Cook had, in 1778, discovered North Cape (Nordenskiold's Cape Irkaipi) and the Island of Kolioutchine which he named Burney's Island. In 1791, Captain Billings, after having disembarked on the shore of the Bay of Saint Laurent in the Sea of Okhotsk, went by land to the Bay of Kolioutchine and then to Cape Chelagsk.

It was from the accounts of Wrangel and his lieutenants Matiouchkine and Kozmine, as well as from what he knew of the expeditions of Billings and some others less known, such as the merchant Chalaouroff, of Yakoutsk, and Captain Saritchoff, that Yegor had fixed upon his route. He was not ignorant of the fact that the Tchouktchis were a people to be feared and to be looked out for, but never had the terrible possibility of an abduction with armed hand of Davidoff's daughter entered among his apprehensions.

The unfortunate Nadege, confined in the double tent of the chief of a tribe established to the south of the Bay of Kolioutchine, now no longer hoped for deliverance if it were not effected by the intelligence and courage of her adopted brother.

Ladislas, without being forced to do so, had followed her, hoping to be able to protect and be useful to her. The young girl's abductors numbered seven. Among them was the old Tchouktchi who had asked hospitality of the exiles a few days before.

They were commanded by a young chief established temporarily at the Bay of Tchaounsk, but whose permanent fishing quarters were at the Bay of Kolioutchine.

The Tchouktchi kamakay, finding himself much too near the wintering place of the white men from the west, gave the signal for departure and was followed by all those belonging to his tribe, the richest taking with them their slaves, descendants, doubtless, of former prisoners of war.

Nadege, treated at first with some consideration, made this new journey in a well covered narta, having beside her her dear Ladislas, whom she pressed to her bosom as if she feared they would snatch him from her. Numerous dogs drew the narta, excited by a slave who ran on foot beside the vehicle. As the tribe advanced towards the east, Ladislas, whose intention from the first had been to steal away and return to the hut to inform Yegor of the route taken by Nadege's abductors, saw with terror the lengthening of the road he would have to pass over to carry out his plan.

He wished to quit Nadege, but she retained him, explaining to him that, while there was still uncertainty about the locality to which she was being taken, he ought not to abandon her. If he departed at once, how could he inform Yegor? Better would it be for him to remain with her, depending upon the devotion and activity of her betrothed to find them.

On leaving Cape Chelagsk, the coast was seen to be covered with villages composed of a dozen tents each, and, sometimes, of even less. These were settlements of the fixed Tchouktchis, who dwell upon the borders of the sea and are distinct from the nomads or reindeer Tchouktchis.

Their tents were formed of poles or whale ribs covered with reindeer skin. Nadege noticed that these cone shaped habitations bulged out towards the north, but were flat on the opposite side. On this side was a low opening which served as a door and was closed by a skin curtain. A second opening at the top of each tent gave passage to the smoke.

Finally, they arrived at the Bay of Kolioutchine, where was already a portion of the tribe. There, Nadege and Ladislas were installed in the kamakay's tent, which was larger and much more comfortable than the others.

The chief's first two wives were in this tent. These short statured shrews, with black eyes, long, braided hair, and yellow-brown complexions, who bore a strong resemblance to the Esquimaux of Greenland, divining in Nadege a rival, overwhelmed her with work, maltreated her and insulted her in every way.

There was within and at the extremity of the first tent, upon a wooden platform about a foot high, a second tent of much smaller dimensions, a sort of alcove kept well heated by means of a lamp fed with seal oil. This second tent was the lodging place of the kamakay's two wives.

The latter forced Nadege to remain in the exterior tent, always very cold in spite of the fire for cooking purposes; yet the unfortunate young girl breathed there an atmosphere less vitiated than that of the alcove, in which the dark beauties of the Tchouktchi peninsula were somewhat too much at home.

The roughest work, such as bringing snow to be melted for water for household use and gathering up along the coast drifted wood or, in default of that, moss, bones, or whale ribs to feed the fire, fell to Nadege. The kamakay's wives also occupied her in the construction of a kind of net, made of leather strings, to be employed in catching seals, or in the preparation of engines intended to capture wolves; these were pieces of whale whiskers bent double after their ends had been sharpened; the whisker thus prepared is sprinkled with water which is promptly converted into ice. Then the confining strings are cut, the ice sufficing to solder together the two extremities of the whisker, and the whole is covered with grease. The wolf throws itself upon this bait and swallows it. The heat of its stomach melts the ice, the whale whisker springs out and its sharpened ends kill the animal.

The kamakay strove to maintain harmony in his household by administering blows to his two wives. Not knowing any other language than his own, he had not yet succeeded in communicating to Nadege his projects in regard to her otherwise than by counting in English up to three, at the same time pointing in succession to his two wives. He thus gave her clearly to understand that he reserved for her the honor of becoming his third wife.

"One, two, three!" he frequently repeated to her, opening one after another three fingers of his left hand.

Poor Nadege feigned not to comprehend—and comprehended only too well.

"One, two, three!" resumed the kamakay, with his repertoire of gestures. Then, impatient at not advancing with greater rapidity in his marital affairs, he swallowed bumpers of American whisky and retired to the heated alcove.

The kamakay had made the acquisition of a white reindeer, intended to be offered as a sacrifice by the tribe. This immolation was to take place on the first day of the new moon. Ladislas sometimes climbed upon the animal's back, with a secret design that may be guessed, and rode it hither and thither.

One evening, the barking of a dog was heard outside the tent. Nadege and Ladislas recognized the bark of Wab, as the animal did not howl like the Siberian dogs. Davidoff's daughter, full of hope and joy, thought that Yegor had at last arrived to deliver her. But no one appeared. The dog continued to bark in the night.

Then Ladislas persuaded Nadege that the moment for him to flee had come. Mounted upon the white reindeer, he would put forth all his strength, following the sea as closely as possible, to reach Cape Baranoff and the winter hut. Wab would guide him. Perhaps, he would not have to go very far to find Yegor, for it was not to be supposed that the dog had come alone such a long distance.

Nadege, deceived in her expectation, consented to everything the child wished, and, that very night, after having supplied himself with several enormous pieces of reindeer meat cooked in seal fat, he ran after the reindeer intended to be sacrificed, which was wandering around the tents. He easily caught it, and rode away towards the west, preceded by Wab.

The young Pole, gifted with extraordinary strength of will, and possessing, besides, a robust constitution which permitted him to brave the rigors of the cold and all sorts of privations, was quite capable of successfully executing this mad enterprise of devotion.

CHAPTER XXXIII.—THE FUGITIVES AND THE KAMAKAY.

The chief of police had induced the two Yakoute guides to consent to quit the winter hut and depart for Nijni-Kolimsk. Yermac abandoned a portion of the provisions they had brought, especially the fish intended to serve as food for the dogs, and caused the nartas to be loaded with large quantities of tobacco, sugar and gunpowder and some pieces of cloth, the whole coming from the whaler Hugo and Maria.

Nevertheless, the guides had obtained a postponement of the departure for a few days; they had now no reason whatever to urge for a further adjournment. Besides, Tekel and Chort had become convinced that their employers would not return to the hut.

They, therefore, made no further resistance.

The day for the departure arrived.

It was a fine winter day, entirely clear not too cold, and, in fact, all that travelers in such desolate regions could wish.

Yermac was radiant with satisfaction; at last he was about to resume in regard to the fugitives all his advantages! His final orders given, he paid a farewell visit to his son's grave.

But when he returned what was his surprise! Little Ladislas was there! The child, already informed by the Yakoutes of the impending abandonment of the hut, had immediately commanded them in the name of Yegor Semenoff not to obey Yermac He feigned that Yegor had sent them or ders by him to rejoin him with the nartas at the Bay of Kolioutchine, bringing with them the chief of police, peaceably or forcibly.

It was in vain that Yermac, seeing all his trouble about to come to naught, strove to resist. He was obliged to yield. The dogs of the nartas, already turned in the direction of the west, were brought around towards the east. The loads of the sledges were judiciously kept as they were by the little Pole, who thought that the tobacco and powder would be valuable articles of exchange. He added only a few light garments belonging to Nadege and several objects by which she set great store, not forgetting the manuscript of Davidoff's last poems.

The white reindeer was abandoned, a trifle foundered it is true, but out of all danger of being sacrificed by the Tchouktchis.

The nartas started on the journey. Wab once more seemed to wish to act as guide It was necessary, in the first place, according to Ladislas' account, to reach the Bay of Tchaounsk, without going too far from the coast. Then, with the aid of the dog, they would, perhaps, find the tracks of Yegor and M. Lafleur.

Nadege, unhappier than ever since the disappearance of Ladislas and the white reindeer, was subjected to all kinds of ill treatment. She passed her days overwhelmed with the most repulsive tasks, and her nights in tears. She suffered from hunger and cold, disgusted by the unsavory food offered her and refusing to take a place in the common alcove. Night and day she remained in the exterior tent, where the cold made itself terribly felt. The poor girl saw herself wasting away and she thought that nothing but death could end her woes.

One morning, the daughter of the poet Davidoff, become the servant of a savage with the near prospect of being his wife, was cooking reindeer meat in a cast-iron pot, placed over the fire in the centre of the little circle of stones forming the hearth in the midst of the tent. While she watched the boiling, with her delicate hands she emptied the intestines of the animal, to obtain from them and put aside as delicacies certain green particles resembling minced spinach.

She was aided in her toil by a greasy and ill-smelling old domestic, who suffered from very acute pains in her left side and back. The old woman at length drew her long jacket over her head and, seating herself on the ground before the young girl, begged her by gestures to rub the affected parts of her body. The tawny skin of the invalid could not be seen for a thick coating of filth. Nadege was forced to comply with her request, while serving the breakfast to the three principal persons of the tent, the kamakay and his two wives, whose heads and breasts alone protruded from the hangings of the alcove, the rest of the bodies, very thinly clad, remaining within.

The breakfast was composed of raw seal liver, a bowl of blood, yet warm and smoking, from the same animal, and a dish of saur-krout made of fermented willow leaves.

One of the wives, the least tattooed, whose name was Nuketou—the other was called Kokerjabin—was quieting with a resonant "Ah-la-Yah!" a weeping infant at her breast.

While eating the polar sauer-kraut, she washed its face by licking it, precisely as does an animal.

Three warriors, armed with pikes pointed with walrus tusks, were present as visitors. Seated on the ground upon skins, they exchanged with the inhabitants of the alcove their reflections on the tall white stranger with flaxen hair.

In a corner, a second servant—a slave—with arms bare and red with blood to the shoulders, was engaged in cutting slices of seal fish.

Near her, another woman—a neighbor, perhaps—was chewing a reindeer skin to give it pliancy and render it fit for the manufacture of boots and gloves.

Beside the platform, dozed a slut surrounded by a litter of pups, the plaintive cries of which mingled harmoniously with the howls of the frightful infant the wife of the chief was consoling.

The snow was falling without, stifling every sound and scattering occasional flakes about the hearth through the opening at the top of the tent. The snow intercepted the light to such an extent that the flames of the hearth illuminated with ruddy reflections the lofty interior of the habitation.

A host of things—utensils, dishes, and clothes—encumbered the tent more than they furnished or adorned it. They were, to enumerate them more particularly in the disorder in which everything presented itself confusedly to the sight; a huge leather net, different fishing engines, the inevitable drum of the chamans, wooden plates scattered a little everywhere, a pail and troughs also of wood, pipes, iron knives and a hatchet, some stone tools recalling those of the primitive ages of humanity, two or three copper coffee-pots of American importation, a wolf's skull suspended by a strap (without doubt, some amulet), and two seal-skin bags, veritable leather bottles having preserved the shape of the animal and containing an ample supply of seal oil; thrown over ropes were some summer garments, very light and impermeable, made of walrus intestines; suspended from the poles blackened by the smoke which formed the framework of the tent, and extending from one to another, were strings of dried fish and slices of seal fat; in another place were beaver skins from America, and the fur of red and white foxes, all of which were destined to figure at the fair of Irbit or that of Ostrovoye; in the corner was a leather boat, like the kayak of the Esquimaux; in another corner lay a quantity of reindeer antlers still fixed to the frontal bones; and here and there were huge logs of drift wood, driven into the ground to serve as seats.

After breakfast, the kamakay, whose name was Tchikine, summoned the slut to him by whistling, and placed about its neck, as a sacrifice to the spirit of evil, a garland of dried moss.

At this moment, from the round hole at the top of the tent, some one—a visitor—spat upon the hearth. All present raised their heads, even Nadege, who was becoming familiar with the manners and customs of the locality.

The kamakay uttered an invitation to enter, and the visitor, who had not seen from without the low doorway, masked as it was by the snow, descended without ceremony through the chimney, sliding down one of the poles. He fell at the feet of Nadege, who recognized in the intruder—Tekel!

The young girl uttered a cry of surprise and joy.

"And Yegor Semenoff!" demanded she, precipitately.

"He is here!" answered the guide; "with M. Lafleur, the lad, and the chief of police!"

"Is it possible!" exclaimed Nadege.

"What do you want!" said the kamakay to Tekel, astonished at this conversation in a language he did not understand between the young girl and the intruder.

"What do I want!" said Tekel, in the tongue of the Tchouktchis; "you shall know immediately. Where is the door!"

Nadege had already removed from the entrance to the tent the reindeer skin which closed it. Without, some one had cleared away the snow which obstructed the doorway. The little Pole entered first, and threw himself upon the young girl's neck.

Then the kamakay saw in this invasion of his domicile some trouble for himself. He grasped his batase (a long iron blade fixed in the end of a rod) and advanced towards the meddlesome visitors. The three warriors present, seeing him on the defensive, left their places and ranged themselves behind him.

Yegor, M. Lafleur, and Yermac penetrated successively into the tent. Yegor saw only the poor Nadege weeping with joy and clasped her warmly to his bosom. M. Lafleur went straight to the kamakay, in whom he inspired respect by his decided attitude The Parisian drew his pistols from his belt, and, preparing himself at need to sustain an attack, told the guide to explain to the chief the reason of their presence.

While they separated Wab from the slut with the garland of dry moss, which the animal had seized by the neck, thus prematurely beginning hostilities, Tekel announced to the kamakay that he had before him the relatives and friends of the young Russian girl abducted from Cape Baranoff, and that he would do well to give her up without resistance.

"But I want her for my third wife," objected the kamakay.

"There is the man who is going to marry her," said Tekel, pointing to Yegor.

The kamakay cast at the latter a look of defiance; then he took a position like a warrior who is ready to sustain his acts with arms in his hands.

"I could kill him like a dog," said Yegor, seizing one of his pistols, "but I wish to do him the honor of accepting his challenge. Tell him to advance," added he, addressing the guide.

"Advance, if you have the courage!" said the Yakoute, to the chief of the Tchouktchis.

The kamakay took two steps backwards—he recoiled that he might the better advance—manipulating his batase so that he might fall on Yegor and thrust the blade of his weapon into his stomach.

Nadege, quick as lightning, turned aside the blow by grasping the handle of the arm, while Yegor resolutely took aim at his adversary.

But Yermac interfered. Pushing away Yegor's pistol, he placed himself between him and the native chief.

From the moment the chief of police had been constrained to follow Ladislas and the two Yakoute guides through the country of the Tchouktchis, he had lived under the dominion of this thought: would it not be possible to utilize the relations existing between the chiefs of the native tribes of the peninsula and the Russian government, to obtain the arrest of the fugitives and their detention until he should be prepared to take them back to Yakoutsk!

He had come to believe that this was feasible. In consequence, he was about to use the authority of the Czar, more nominal than real, at first, for the benefit of Yegor and his companions. If he succeeded, the fugitives would afterwards be at his discretion.

Such were the reasons for his interference.

AS SEEN BY A NEW YORKER.

A prominent New York gentleman just returning from a visit to Johnstown told a DAILY NEWS reporter the following story of what he saw and how he felt while in that unfortunate city. We give the story only in substance, as follows:

It is now sixteen months since that ill fated day when thousands of people were suddenly swept to an awful doom and, were newspaper reports to be credited and believed, Johnstown would now be a thriving, booming city, of far more substantial and handsome appearance than it was prior to the 31st day of May' 1889. But I tell you, sir; the public has no idea of the present appearance of the city and surrounding locality.

It is true considerable building has been done, some handsome and durable structures have been erected but the majority of houses put up are of an inferior class. And then the streets where building has not been in progress present a discouraging appearance. Old cellars partly filled with broken and twisted timbers, brick, stone, iron, and the whole mass completely covered with sand or hard-dried clay; and the most repellant thought about it all is that nobody knows how many human bodies lay beneath or among the debris, in these old cellars or in the lower parts of the town which were filled up many feet.

While walking along the Conemaugh on sand that had been washed there looking at the twisted timbers: the ends of railroad iron, pieces of cars and everything imaginable and possible to think of and describe, my very bones were chilled with the thought that perhaps every step I made was on the dead body of some lost one; that perhaps some kind father, found mother, loving sister or brother or, maybe some dear little baby's body, was daily being trodden upon by the multitudinous throng that either on business, pleasure or curiosity bent, wend their way back and forth across the sands and through the streets of the ill-fated Johnstown. It is, indeed, a chilling feeling and I have no desire to ever visit there again through idle curiosity.

And then outside of the town, all through the Conemaugh valley and way down the course of the South Fork, are yet strewn the fragments and wrecks of many houses, broken bridges, broken cars, locomotives, and everything that was in the course of the rushing, roaring torrent of water. When will the last vestige of this dread disaster be cleared away? A generation will have passed to the tomb ere that be done.

But all praise and honor to the business men and citizens of Johnstown, who escaped with their lives, for the pluck and enterprise they have shown. Scarcely had the raging water disappeared until work was at once commenced to restore order out of chaos and to rebuild the town as of old. The progress that has already been made in that direction shows a determination and a will to succeed and, with the help of a kind providence, there may yet be a bright future before all who once suffered so terribly.

A vein of superior coal, sixty-four inches in thickness, has been found in the immediate vicinity of Coalport.

Some Somerset parents complain that the school building in that town isn't fit to shelter cattle, much less children.

On last Thursday, the 2 story dwelling house of Elijah Lyons, one mile south of Ligonier, was burned to the ground with most of its contents. The fire was caused by a spark dropping on the roof while a heavy fire was on for baking purposes.

While out gathering chestnuts a lad named Wilson Beers, a resident of Blair City, Cambria county, fell from a tree and fractured both arms three inches above the wrists. He walked two miles with the broken members dangling by his side.

Mr. John J. Good, of East Taylor township, Cambria county, is credited with a hog of the female persuasion that beats the record for fecundity—she having one day the past week given birth to seventeen living pigs. The mother is a Jersey Red and the father a Poland China. Farmers say that beats the record.

The new Methodist Episcopal church at Irvona, Clearfield county, Rev. George Trach, pastor, will be dedicated on Sunday next. The morning sermon will be preached by Rev. G. D. Pennepacker, of Clearfield, while Rev. W. F. D. Noble, of Hontzdale, will preach in the evening. Presiding Elder Hamlin will assist in the services.

At the Opera House.

A packed house greeted James Reilly in "The Broom-maker," at Garman's Opera House Friday night. In the performance last evening Mr. Reilly sustained the reputation that had gone ahead of him and proved himself to be a very clever actor and a good singer. "Gretchen" played her part to a nicety and was always heartily applauded whenever she appeared on the stage and several times was encored. Mr. Reilly's supporting company was a good one. "Jerry" was fully appreciated by the fun loving while little "Hans" and "Edna" were beloved by all. The company throughout is a more than the average strong one and Mr. Reilly is to be congratulated. He cannot return to Bellefonte too soon.

Will Begin Collecting on Monday.

The committee who have been soliciting subscriptions for the new fire steamer desire to inform all persons who have so generously subcribed that they will begin making collections on Monday. They hope all subscriptions can be promptly paid as it is the desire to start a committee on Wednesday to inspect and secure the steamer. Also, while the committee are going their rounds making their collections if there are any who have not yet contributed any amount would be thankfully received as the entire amount has not yet been raised.

—The people of Bellefonte do not fully appreciate the fine play building Mr Garman has generously erected for the accommodation of all. Some of the people of Bellefonte should go to some of our neighboring towns and see their opera houses, Clearfield, for instance Just a square room, no raised floor, a few chairs not as good as the poorest in Garman's opera house, but seated mostly with benches, high white walls, no side lights, old fashioned footlights, scenery and stage fixings, and the whole thing looking more like a barn than an opera house.

THE COUNCIL'S DOINGS.

Several Insignificent Petitions—A Proposition to Put Arc Lights on the Streets Was Conditionally Accepted.

Council met on Monday evening at 7 o'clock with six members present, the seventh and eighth coming in later. After the prelimmary opening of the session a committee from Half Moon hill, Messrs. Rapp, Buchannan and Meese, asked that council make some better way or means of getting from West High street up on the hill. The petitioners asked for a pair of steps up the hill to the road leading out on top thereof to ascend from the rear of Mr. James Rankin's property. The matter was referred to the Street committee for investigation and report as to the probable cost, etc.

Mr. Bartley and Mr. Lieb were present to request council to make a proper grading at the entrance of an alley leading off of Reynold's Avenue, by the property of Mr. Bartley and the Stover estate. No action was taken on this.

A long list of petitioners from East Howard street appealed to the "honor" of the council to give them a boardwalk out that thoroughfare; they would also like some light. Referred to Street committee.

The Water committee reported that a general overhauling had been given the pumps and that this week all the fire plugs and pipe lines would be tested and put in proper condition for the winter.

Finance committee reported investigation of the case of Mrs. Bradley, who asked an exoneration of $30 taxes for the year 1889, saying that the tax was on real estate but the family was poor Council voted to exonerate the lady of half of the tax. The committee also reported balance due treasurer on the first of October, 1890 $2,212.49.

In regard to the sewer running from Allegheny to Spring street council finally decided to put in a water trap at the mouth or entrance of the sewer on Allegheny street near L. T. Munson's residence.

THE ARC LIGHT TO BE HAD.

But of all the business transacted the following proposition is of the most importance to Bellefonters in general.

OFFICE OF
EDISON ELECTRIC ILLUMINATING CO.,
BELLEFONTE, PA., OCT. 6,

To the Councilmen of the Borough of Bellefonte:

GENTLEMEN: We propose installing an Arc light plant to illuminate the streets of Bellefonte. We, therefore, desire to make the following proposal to the Council of this Borough.

We will erect, run and maintain sixteen 2,000 candle power Arc Lamps, and with these displace 65 of the present Incandescent lamps. (These 65 are givng a combined light of 1500 candle power.) We will also propose to run and maintain, as heretofore, the remaining 40 Incandescent lamps for the benefit of the outskirts of the Borough. The Arc lamps, giving a total of 32,000 candle power, we would suggest to be located as follows:

At the Diamond; Allegheny and Howard; Allegheny and Linn; Allegheny and Logan; Allegheny and Curtin; Spring and Linn; Spring and Howard; Spring and High; Spring and Bishop; Linn and Water; Ridge and Lamb; Bishop and Penn; Thomas and Lamb; Thomas and High; High and Water; between Court House and jail.

We will run and maintain these sixteen 2,000 candle power lamps and also the 40 Incandescent lamps, giving a total of 33,000 candle power light, (as against 2,600 candle power under the present system) for the sum of $182.50 per month.

We will also agree to supply additional Arc lights, wherever needed, over and above the number stated above—16,—for an extra sum of $8 per month each. Every additional Incandescent light, over and above the 40, we will supply at the rate of $1.50 per month.

Trusting this will meet with the approval of the Board of Councilmen,

We remain very respectfully,
EDISON ELECTRIC ILLUMINATING CO.
E. KITSON, Supt.

After a little discussion council voted to accept the proposition, on certain conditions, and the Street committee, assisted by the Finance committee, was authorized to enter into an agreement to that effect.

The business of the evening being over a large amount of bills, among which were the $100 annual appropriations to the Hose companies, were approved and council adjourned.

—"I would rather be a human sandt which, with the Gospel on my breas and back, and rescue souls, than preach in a frescoed temple to a handful of old men and women who have gone to church so long that they have sacred rheumatism," is the way a Chicago clergyman shook up a small but select congregation. If preachers in general adopt this style pew rents will have to be raised.

A Large Cabbage.

One of the largest heads of cabbage ever seen in the Bellefonte market was brought there on Tuesday by a man from Curtin township. The head was fully sixteen inches in diamater of solid cabbage and fully four feet across from one outside leaf to another. It weighed about 30 pounds. The man that brought it said it was a Pattison head and we don't doubt it as one is about as great a cabbage head as the other. The man who owned it also had two large pumpkins and he said those were only fair samples of what he had at home. Curtin township must be a good place for cabbage heads and pumpkins.

An Immense Estate.

We clip the following from the Karthaus Times:

The name of L. M. Coudreit is familiar to almost every person in Clearfield and Centre counties, but few have any idea of the amount of property he left at his demise. From Sheriff McCloskey, who will soon execute a writ of partition in this estate, we learned that he owned 43 tracts of land in Covington township, which aggregate 3,265 acres; 19 tracts in Girard township, which aggregate 2,803 acres; a tract of of 65 acres in Karthaus township; a tract of 118 acres in Graham township; the undivided half interest in 650 acres in Union township; 150 acres in Burnside township, Centre county; a lot and the undivided half interest in another in Karthaus; two lots in Frenchville; two in Mulsonburg; 32 lots with river front and a steam saw mill at Middletown, Dauphin county, and 13 lots and 3¾ acres in Fort Royal, Dauphin county. The expense of setting a valcation on this property, surveying, making drafts, etc., will amount to between $500 and $1,000.

That Lewisburg Fire.

LEWISBURG, Oct. 5.—This afternoon one of the leading business blocks here at Third and Market streets, was gutted by fire. At 10 o'clock the flames burst from the roof of the Saturday News office, and rapidly communicated to the adjoining property. The roofs of three buildings were burned and the contents of the News office and Russell & Lawshe General store and P B Stahl's bakery were all badly damaged by water, B K Focht's loss on his newspaper office is about $500. Russell & Lawshe's $5000, and Stahl's several hundred dollars. During the excitement some theif stole $110 which Mr. Stahl had secreted under the pillow of his bed. The above losses are covered by insurance. The origin of the fire was spontaneous combustion.

A Prolific Family.

The Indiana Messenger is responsible for the following: The wife of John Beam, of Mitchelville, aged 65 years, gave birth to twins on Monday evening. Her daughter, Mrs. Stratton, who lives in a neighboring township, presented her husband with twins the same evening. Mrs. Stratton's daughter was married a year ago, and lives in Bradford. The friends of Mrs. Stratton and her mother were not yet through congratulating them over the interesting natal coincidence in their families, when Mrs. Stratten received a telegram from her son-in-law announcing that her daughter had given birth to twins on Monday evening. The three double births all occurred within ten minutes of each other.

Would Make an Able and Acceptable Candidate and a Man that Could be Elected.

As our estimable townsman, General Daniel H. Hastings, has positively refused to accept the nomination for Congress from this district it behooves the republican party to look around for a man who would make an acceptable candidate and one that could be elected. Owing to the dissatisfaction in the democratic ranks over the nomination of Krebbs, there is now a very good chance for the republicans to elect a Congressman in this district.

As the time for the election is drawing near it is necessary to get to work at once. The first thing to do is to get a suitable candidate and the News to-day presents the name of Mr. John E. DuBois, of DuBois, Clearfield county. Mr. DuBois is a gentleman who stands high in the estimation of his friends and neighbors at home and is very well thought of abroad. Besides this he is an extensive and very good employer of labor, and would, no doubt, command a large labor vote. Hence, we say, if we can't have Hastings give us DuBois.

Remedy for Insomnia.

A physician recommends a cup of hot bouillon or hot milk, sipped slowly, but while still hot, before going to bed, as a better sleep inducer than all the opiates in the pharmacepoia—as better even than a clear conscience, which isn't very good ethics, you know, but which may be very good medical doctrine notwithstanding. At any rate; his explanation therefore is a solid one. The hot fluid taken into the stomach brings about an increased activity of the blood vessels of the stomach—a slight temporary congestion which relieves the overcharged blood vessels in the brain, and so induces a natural and refreshing sleep. To give this remedy its utmost potency, however, no food should be taken with it, not even a tiny wafer, and the liquid should be sipped as hot as it can be borne.

Street Lights and Police Officers.

MR. EDITOR:—The proposition to light the streets of our town is a good one, as the borough has been paying for darkness quite a long time. Paying for darkness in this enlightened age, is certainly an expensive luxury. It occurrs to a tax payer that the borough is paying quite enough now for lighting the streets. It seems to me that the true policy would be to require the Electric Light Company to light the streets according to their contract, that is, to furnish increased light instead of the council's proposition to increase the cost—in all reason the present cost of lighting the streets is as much as the tax payers can afford to pay. It is an easy matter for men to assemble as the council do and vote away other people's money. The aggregate amount of taxes paid by the council does not exceed three hundred dollars per annum, therefore if the council are disposed to do right, they will consult the wishes of the real tax payers before they increase the borough expenses.

They publish that they have repaired the pumps, etc., at the water works. They do not publish that owing to the profligate waste of water they are compelled to run the steam pump day and night to keep up the supply without a corresponding increase of the revenue.

They have also increased the cost of police services, and, owing to the inefficiency of the police officers, rowdyism has increased to correspond with the increased cost. The "dirty dozen" have full sway and think it would be money well spent if the council will furnish each policeman with an opera glass to aid his vision in distinguishing between virtue and licentiousness on our public streets.
PROGRESS.

They Berated a Policeman.

During the meeting on Tuesday evening, as has always been the general custom, the small boys and some larger ones—both republican and Democratic, made a terrible racket blowing the dreadful tin horn and hurrahing for Delamater and Pattison. This is one of the things that always accompanies a political mass meeting and, of course, Tuesday night was no exception. But the democratic leaders were in no mood to stand anything of this kind and they wanted a wholesale arrest of all the boys made. The police could not do this and so said, when three of the leading lights in the party commenced to berate the officer in a terrible manner. Their assault was entirely uncalled for and very ungentlemanly, but in exact keeping with a democratic politican. The policeman was not at all frightened but he did say this morning that he thought the lion, tiger and chipmunk of Main & VanAmburgh's circus had arrived in town ahead of time. Vote the whole Republican ticket.

DOCTORS AND TYPHOID FEVER.

Another Contribution on An All Important Subject.

The article in the DAILY NEWS a few days ago under the above caption is to be commended. The Doctors, as well as the people, are slow to trace the cause of the fever to the use of articles of food and drink. It is a fact however, that many cases of typhoid fever have been caused by using milk obtained from families which had the fever.

A notable case was that of Rev. S. J. Wilson, an eminent Presbyterian Divine, whose death was caused by typhoid fever a few years ago at Sewickley, Pa. Investigation proved beyond all question that the fever existed in the family of the man from whom the Doctor's family obtained their milk. The physicians were positive that the germs of the fever were carried into the Doctor's family through the milk.

This shows how absolutely necessary it is to have not only the water we use ourselves, clean and pure, but it should be in the same condition for the cows from which we get our supply of milk.

But what have our physicians to do with this? It is not out of the way to say that they should be diligent in informing the people of its dangers that, surround them by the many ways in which this fearful disease may be contracted.

Some physicians, not all by any means are mortally slow in finding when a patient has typhoid fever. Two or three instances, have lately come to our notice, in which the physician insisted that the patients, he was called to see did not have typhoid fever, and it was only when another physician was called that the first one found out that his patients had typhoid fever. While in another case it has taken the physician two weeks to learn the fact that his patient had a severe attack of the same, fearful disease. In cases like these the Doctor failed to make a proper diagnosis of his case. It is altogether possible that he did not know how to determine what was really the matter, and if he did not he ought to quit the practice of medicine. Life is too precious to be frittered away in experiments by incompetent physicians.

The diagnosis and treatment of cases of fever by some physicians reminds me of the treatment of typhoid fever by a turkish Doctor. He had a patient who was a carpenter by trade, afflicted with this disease. Upon calling one day he found him much improved and on inquiry learned, that the day before, the patient had for dinner, a mess of boiled cabbage. The doctor immediately wrote in his diary "good for typhoid fever, boiled cabbage." A day or two later he was called to see another patient, who by trade was a cooper. Sure of success he immediately prescribed "boiled cabbage," when he called upon this patient the second time he found him dead. Then the doctor made another entry in his diary "boiled cabbage good for typhoid fever, when the patient is a carpenter."

Of course physicians will sniffle at this, but the manner in which some people are treated for typhoid fever is not much of an improvement on the turkish doctor.

The August number of "Annals of Hygiene" contains a notice of a test for the diagnosis of typhoid fever by Dr. T. F. Wood, Secretary of the North Carolina State Board of Health. The Board of Health of Pennsylvania propose to publish Dr. Wood's communication in their annual report. It might not be out of place for some of the physicians in Centre county to obtain their report and examine Doctor Wood's test, perhaps they could tell a case of typhoid fever before it had run two weeks.
